VERDICT OF $700 FOR PALMER

He Brought Customer Who Bought Mrs. DuBois's Property—She Says She Didn't Know He Was Real Estate Agent.

At the conclusion of defendant's case Judge Nichols in supreme court directed a verdict for plaintiff in the action brought by Horace Palmer of Poughkeepsie against Mary S. DuBois. The action was brought to recover commission on the sale of a store property which plaintiff had sold for her.

The case was taken up in the morning and when there was no defence offered a verdict for plaintiff was directed by the court. Just as plaintiff and his attorney J. N. Vanderlyn left the court house defendant and her attorney D. W. Ostrander arrived and a motion to reopen the default was granted.

Palmer who resides in Poughkeepsie and is salesman for bread and also a registered real estate dealer while on his bread route through Tuttletown visited the store of Mrs. DuBois and while there she asked him to get her a purchaser for her property. He brought customers and finally a buyer who purchased the property for $14,000. He testified that he brought the customer to the store and introduced him and went with him through the property. On a second visit to the place he also brought the customer and as a result a contract was signed.

Mrs. DuBois testified that she did not know Mr. Palmer was a real estate dealer and that she asked him, as she had done a number of people, to get her a customer and that after he brought the customer and introduced him she paid no more attention to Palmer. She had expected to make him a present when the deal was consummated and she had received her money. She said that Palmer had brought another man to look at the property. A clerk in the store also testified that he had heard Mrs. DuBois tell Palmer several times to get her a buyer for the property.

At the conclusion of the defendant's case Judge Nichols directed a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $700. In directing the verdict Judge Nichols remarked that according to the testimony of plaintiff he had been asked to sell the property by the defendant and that he had secure a customer and the property had been sold to that customer. The fact that the deal had been made to a customer brought by Palmer was not denied by defendant but admitted. She also admitted that she had asked plaintiff not once but several times to get her a customer and was therefore bound to pay either the commission on the sale or a fair amount for the services rendered. Plaintiff had produced witness whose testimony was not contradicted that 5 per cent commission was the usual and fair rate of payment for such a service and he therefore on that grounds directed a verdict for plaintiff.

RELATION OF DRUGS TO CRIMINALITY

Secretary of State Hamilton, Former Commissioner of Correction in New York City, Addresses Rotary Club.

Dr. James A. Hamilton, secretary of state of the state of New York, was the speaker at the Rotary ladies' night dinner at the Advance Restaurant Wednesday evening, which was attended by Rotarians and their wives to the number of about eighty. In the absence of President J. T. Johnson, who is at Atlantic City attending a convention of hardware dealers, and Chairman E. R. Acker, of the entertainment committee, who is also in Atlantic City attending a convention of gas men, Vice President E. E. Fessenden presided. There was the usual, and as usual, some unusual singing led by Harry P. Dodge.

years commissioner of correction in New York city, having been appointed by Mayor Hylan. While in this office Dr. Hamilton took special interest in the drug addicts confined for treatment on Riker's Island and made a special study of the problem of drug addiction. This subject was the one discussed in his address to the Kingston Rotarians, a speech that was closely listened to and greatly appreciated.

Speaking of crime and criminals generally, Dr Hamilton said that there were 75,000 cases annually that came under his jurisdiction as commissioner of correction. Among these were not only criminals, but those detained while under accusation, drug addicts detained for treatment, etc. Briefly reviewing the functions of the various prisons, the speaker said that a majority of those convicted were not normal physically as well as mentally. Physical defects reacted on the mentality and examination showed that from 80 to 90 per cent of criminals had some physical defect. This was especially true of those who became habitual criminals. In New York was one woman with a record of 47 convictions.

Following the disclosures made by physical examinations, an attempt is made to remedy physical defects and in this many of the city's most expert physicians and surgeons are giving their services free. Following this an attempt is made to give vocational training and to furnish opportunity for employment. Criminals among the foreign element have come here with the idea that liberty means that they can do as they please, and these must be shown that liberty is bounded by law.

Drug addiction, which so often leads to crime, is taking the flower of America, most of the addicts becoming so while under 20 years of age. Invited by some chum to "take a sniff," the young person enjoys the wonderful dreams that the drug induces, but comes out of the dreams with a thud and seeks more drugs and more dreams. In a month the habit is fixed beyond the volition of the victim to break it. Drugs are expensive, the quantity needed grows greater and in order to obtain the money for drugs, almost any crime will be committed. These persons have keen minds and the same mentality directed in right lines would bring great success.

Riker's Island has been set aside for the treatment of drug addicts. These patients do not want to be cured and they and their friends on the outside will go to any length to avoid a cure. There are two methods of treatment. One is "cold turkey," which consists in depriving the patient of drugs at the outset, which is cruel. The other method is that of rapid reduction in dosage, which lasts from five to 12 days. But the patient is not yet cured of the habit. He must have fresh air and exercise and to this end the patients are compelled to work out of doors and sweat the remnants of the drugs out of their systems. They work on the grounds and do gardening. In 1918 they raised $13,000 worth of vegetables. Of those treated at Riker's Island 52 per cent do not come back after their discharge.

Showing the ingenuity displayed in smuggling drugs to those under treatment, Dr. Hamilton cited cases where drugs were placed under the flaps of envelopes in which letters to patients were enclosed, under postage stamps and, in one case, a letter was sent special delivery with 12 one cent stamps on it with dope enough under them to dose every person in the place. When these methods were detected, letters were soaked in a solution of dope and the prisoners chewed pieces of the paper. One patient came in with cotton in his ear, complaining of earache. The cotton was pulled out and the man's ear was full of dope. Another man came in with dope under an adhesive plaster on the sole of his foot.

At the close of his address Dr. Hamilton was loudly applauded.

The present secretary of state was once a newsboy on the streets of New York. Later on, he found employment in one of the newspaper offices, starting in as office boy and working up until he emerged some years later as a type setter. It was during those years that Secretary Hamilton saved his money and laid the foundation for a college course. He graduated from the University of Rochester in 1898, having the distinction of gaining prominence in both the classroom and upon the athletic field. During the years that followed, he was an instructor in both the elementary and high schools of New York city, taking post graduate work at Columbia and New York universities. Secretary Hamilton was elected to the state senate in 1914, and served a term of two years, becoming commissioner of correction in 1918. While the war was in progress, Secretary Hamilton was chosen as chairman of the central purchase committee of New York city, which bought the supplies for the several city departments. Secretary Hamilton is a member of many societies and organizations, including the American Prison Association, the American Academy of Political and Social Science, National Conference of Social Work, the Academy of Political Science, and others. From Kingston, where he spent the night as the guest of E. E. Fessenden, Secretary Hamilton motored to Portchester, to attend the 100th anniversary of that city's fire department.

GOVERNORS SPLIT ON PROHIBITION

Pinchot Becomes Dryer Than Ever While Louisiana, Missouri and New Jersey Executives Come Out For Beer and Wine.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

West Baden Springs, Ind., Oct. 18.—Prohibition today split wide open the governors' conference. In spirited discussions shoving aside those listed in the regular schedule for the meeting—taxation and agricultural relief—lines were drawn sharply between the so-called dry and liberal state executives on the liquor law issue. This schedule became the paramount theme of the conference.

On all sides, especially in informal gatherings, the national dry act and the "law and order" conference with President Coolidge at the White House Saturday were the leading topics of debate.

Wide confusion existed among the state chiefs on the challenge of Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, charging President Coolidge personally with full responsibility for the enforcement of the dry law.

In characteristic Rooseveltian fashion the Pennsylvania governor, who acted as spokesman for the "bone dry" element, denounced the present system of enforcement and demanded that in order to make America thoroughly arid, the federal administration extend greater and more harmonious cooperation to state agencies in running down bootlegging and suppressing illicit booze traffic.

He lashed verbal rights and lefts at the methods used by the prohibition unit in Washington in issuing liquor withdrawal permits. Thousands of the permits, he said, are being forged, with the result that liquor is being flooded over the country in violation of the laws. To ask the states to stop this traffic, unless more strenuous.

More strenuous efforts are made to wipe out faking, he declared, "imposes a burden upon the states that is stupendous."

Pinchot promised to lay bare this condition to President Coolidge at the White House gathering with the additional warning that "he intended to speak straight from the shoulder."

The more liberal forces rallied around Governor Parker of Louisiana, when Pinchot remarked that the fight against liquor is just begun." Parker prophesies "that prohibition seems certain to become the major issue in the 1924 presidental campaign and in both parties."

Parker held little hope for "100 per cent enforcement." He thought that the most suitable way to rid the country of the "prohibition mess" would be to repeal the Volstead act to permit manufacture of wine and beer, this being sanctioned under the strictest governmental supervision.

Under the Parker flag were Governors Hyde, of Missouri, and Silzer, of New Jersey.

Whatever may be the political significance of Pinchot's moves, he made it quite plain today that he proposes to be one of the "driest of the drys." He intends to carry the dry battle cry all over his own state and to join with the citizenship conference in the nationwide campaign to enforce the liquor law to the very letter. He politely refused to discuss the possibility that he might be the political standard bearer for the dry wing in the Republican party in 1924.

His only reference to politics was that "politics should be taken out of prohibition enforcement" and that under personal direction of President Coolidge, federal and state authorities should "put ther shoulder to the wheel behind a rigid dry enforcement fight."

NEW HURLEY.

New Hurley, Oct. 18.—Mrs. W. W. Penoyar of Newburgh was a week end guest of Mrs. Isaac Sutton and daughter.

A large delegation of ladies from this place attended the missionary convention held at Shawangunk on Wednesday of last week.

The harvest home festival, which was held in the church on October 7, proved very successful. A large collection of fruits and vegetables were received. On Monday morning they were taken to the Industrial Home at Kingston by J. W. Monell and George Sherwood. The offering amounted to over $40, and was used to purchase clothing for the children at the home.

On Friday evening, October 26, a sociable will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Birch. A fine musical program is being arranged, also a good supper. Proceeds for the benefit of the church.

THE OFFICE CAT

No Curiosity.

"Most women have a great deal of curiosity," said the husband.

"I haven't a bit," replied the wife. "Then why turn this paper upside down to see what this says?"

We're Kiddies.

Our lives are interwoven
With camouflage and bluff—
We talk about Beethoven
And play the jazzy stuff.

One of the 41 maniacs who escaped from the Illinois State Hospital was captured when found running around in circles. And after they had been trying to teach him to go on the square.

Oh, Myrtle!

She was the girl with the necklace,
In a smile she was barely clad—
From her finger-tips
To her rosy-red lips,
She was "the berries," by Gad!

He was tall and graceful, too,
With a bit of the nonchalant;
He grabbed her; he squeezed her,
And held her tight.
You could almost hear him pant.

But before I go any further,
Let me give you the honest facts—
He was a window-dresser
And she was—
A figure of wax!

Let's be perfectly frank, she said, as she stepped between me and the setting sun.

Telling an Alligator's Age.

The width of an alligator's nose between his eye teeth is proper place for determining the reptile's age, according to the experts on such subjects. After the reptile is ten feet long the nose widens one-quarter of an inch for each 50 years the alligator lives. Ocklawaha, the largest alligator in captivity, weighs 1,400 pounds and is 13½ feet long. He is estimated to be several hundred years old.

			DOUBLE-FACED Number	List Price
Tosca—E lucevan le stelle (The Stars Were Shining) In Italian (Puccini) Tosca—O dolci mani (Oh, Gentle Hands) (Puccini)	Beniamino Gigli Beniamino Gigli		942	$1.50
The Juggler (Moszkowski) Piano Solo Etude in F Minor (Dohnanyi) Piano Solo	Sergei Rachmaninoff Sergei Rachmaninoff		943	1.50

In this remarkable piano record, hear Moszkowski's "Juggler" throw silver balls in the air, and finish off with a whirl. Then hear the subtle and tremendously difficult Etude of Erno Dohnanyi. Both played with splendid virile power.

Light Vocal Selections

Honey, Dat's All Laddie o' Mine	Olive Kline Lucy Isabelle Marsh	45367	1.00

Two songs for the heart of Woman, however mute and however deeply hidden. "Honey, Dat's All" has wonderfully soft, smooth cadences. "Laddie o' Mine" is in waltz time. Both songs have orchestral interludes.

My Sweetie Went Away I'm a Lonesome Cry Baby	Billy Murray-Ed. Smalle Aileen Stanley	19144	.75

These three favorite Victor artists are appearing this week as blues artists. Murray and Smalle have a weepy number you already know as a fox trot. Miss Stanley is an excellent cry baby in her home.

Recitations

Ten Little Mice and When Father Shakes the Stove She Powders Her Nose and The Good Little Boy	Edgar Guest Edgar Guest	45368	1.00

More of Edgar Guest's familiar little spoken rhymes of everyday life and everyday people. The poet "speaks his own pieces" which are in language and metre of the simplest order.

Dance Records

Roses of Picardy—Waltz Marchéta—Waltz	The Troubadours Green-Arden Orchestra	19117	.75

"Roses of Picardy" was first made famous in song form by John McCormack. It yields a smooth beautiful dance. "Marchéta" has delicate whistlings and shivery xylophone tremolos. Both ideal for the present fashion of waltzing.

Last Night on the Back Porch—Fox Trot If I Can't Get the Sweetie I Want—Fox Trot	Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra	19139	.75

Paul Whiteman is back from his European triumphs. He has been crowned "King of the Jazz." In the first number he has a jolly fox trot with vocal refrain. In the second there are new effects. Brilliant, richly-colored, perfect records.

Wolverine Blues—Fox Trot House of David Blues—Fox Trot	Benson Orchestra of Chicago The Virginians	19140	.75

Two numbers that are sure to please dancers who like unusual effects in their accompaniment.

An Oriental Note in New Millinery

Paris Designers Are Featuring Fall Hats in Chinese Styles.

Paris milliners are very busily engaged in making lovely sets, consisting of hat and scarf or hat, muff and scarf, writes a Paris correspondent in the New York Times. Suzanne Talbot has some wonderful things developed in black velvet, heavily embroidered in metal threads of varying shades of gold. The antique gold, the greenish gold, the bronze gold and the pure brilliant gold intermingled in this way are as varied in depth of tone as if there were shades of yellow.

Talbot's designs are taken from the Italian Renaissance and from Chinese motifs. In fact, since the Bal de l'Opera, the climax of the summer social season in Paris, there has been quite a flare for Chinese effects. The reproduction of the oriental styles, such as were a part of the period of Louis XV, from which historical epoch the costumes for the Grand Prix ball were evolved, has turned the attention of designers in this direction.

The art of the Orient is seemingly an unlimited source of inspiration, and notably when taken as the French have interpreted it since the time of Louis XIV, the splendor of whose court attracted ambassadors and noble personages from all the countries of the Far East.

Lewis, the man milliner of Paris, has many hats in Chinese style, some of which are frankly the coolie hat. Another feature in millinery is the evidence of the tam-o'-shanter. Practically every milliner in Paris is trying to get away from the small cloche, which has dominated so strongly all millinery of the last year.

In spite of this, the famous Rose Descat hat is still popular. It is even said that customers of this well-known house have been known to order one-half dozen cloches of exactly the same model in half a dozen different colors. These small cloches are most typical when made of suede leather, but all milliners are praying for a change.

Many of the leading modistes of Paris are developing directoire millinery for autumn and winter. The high, stiff crowns and the narrow brims of these hats are modified by clever devices of trimming and by the long nose veil, which seems made particularly for them.

At the hour, combs are "out," and headdress of any sort is an individual matter. Generally no garniture is to be worn on the hair, though some like to draw a bit of tulle close around the hair and fasten it with a jeweled clasp over the brow, giving an Oriental turban effect. This is a comfortable contrivance for the flapper whose tresses are rebellious or have reached that length in growth that makes them difficult to arrange.

Some of the best jewelers are having a busy season, resetting tiaras and bandeaus, stringing pearls, indicating the enduring popularity of these for formal occasions. After all, few women could resist the distinction of wearing a jeweled crown, and they know that pearls, "like Parma violets, go with any gown."

Straight Box Coat Is One of Fall Fashions

When in doubt choose a suit with a straight box coat and go on your way toward winter rejoicing; for box coats of varied lengths are fashion's favorites. They are approved in all sorts of suitings and here is one for fall made of a ribbed material. It has three-quarter-length sleeves, small patch pockets and fastens with a narrow silk tie at the throat. An overblouse of figured crepe de chine is worn with the plain, straight skirt.

Wrap-Around Stays.

The Parisenne has definitely decided that there shall be no return to the "regular" corset, the sort which is heavily boned. She prefers a wrap-around, and some of the step-in sort have no bones whatever, but only elastic. How to achieve the small and normal waistline without a "regular" corset is now the designer's problem.

Lovely Draperies.

Among the lovely materials for draperies now shown in the shops, Quaker cruft net in colors is worthy of special mention. It is durable, hangs in graceful lines and gives opportunity for pleasing color effects. Glace and fiber gauze are also to be had in a splendid range of colors.

Nonsense.

Divine right of kings gave way before popular majorities. Right of majorities is now conceded, but nobody grants anything divine about it. Vox populi, vox Dei. Nonsense.

Silhouette for Fall Is Wider, Paris Says

The silhouette for autumn, according to the models shown in Paris, is wider than that of the summer, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Tribune. Very little drapery is used. The line is increased by the use of long, full tunics that extend to within two or three inches of the bottom of the skirt.

Models shown at Philippe et Gaston's show a nice balancing of the flares that are authorized for autumn. Where the full tunic is applied in front there is a cape to the hips in back or the back of the waist is bloused markedly.

The circular all-around tunic is also being shown. Jean Patou is displaying a number of models with simple bodices and flaring skirts. One of these models is made of mauve and green figured silk and has a chiffon yoke in the back of the waist, braided with soutache. The two inches of skirt visible below the tunic is also of chiffon similarly braided.

The waistline shows a tendency to meander all over the silhouette. A waistline that began at the normal line in front and extended to the hips in back was introduced by Cheruit in the spring, and the new models for autumn have this line. Callot uses it on some of her most charming new models, varying it by beginning the line low in front on some models and making it come to normal in back. Some of her gowns have an absolutely normal waistline.

Jean Patou is also showing the sliding waistline on many of his newest models, and he accentuates it on some of them by making the gown very bloused in back and quite close fitting in front.

Madeleine Vionnet exaggerates this waistline on one of her models by the use of a sash that is placed high in front and ties in a large bow at the hipline in back. This exactly reverses the 1850 silhouette, which was prevalent in the spring openings.

Autumn Brown, Color for Outdoor Apparel

A prominent merchant in the East makes the statement that "the Parisienne lives to defeat age and uses all the arts of massage, powder and paint, whereas the American woman is content to let nature take its course, but, at the same time, aids nature by youthful activities."

Autumn is the great brown period in nature and it holds true in the apparel for outdoors. The browns lend in the weaves and cloths for knickers, suits and footwear, and boots and oxfords in brown have a decided place in the scheme of women's outdoor dress.

Machine Embroidered Velvets in Limelight

Machine embroidered velvets are very good fall materials and are used for both coats and dresses, sometimes for sleeves and again for the entire garment. Observes a Paris fashion writer in the New York Tribune: Blanchini and Wilmart are showing some wonderful embroidered silks and satins for autumn done in designs that are inspired by old Persian miniatures.

All-over braided woolen materials are also being used, and embroidered fur is one of the fancies for fall. Philippe et Gaston show a full circle cape of nutria embroidered on collar and edges with Persian designs in orange, red and green.

Colors for fall appear to be tete de negre brown, empire green, dark blue and black. Printed silks are very much less in vogue than they have been. Machine embroidered fabrics have largely replaced them.

Cinnamon and Gold.

A Difference

"How long is it going to take to get through with this case?" asked the client, who was under suspicion of housebreaking. "Well," replied the young lawyer, thoughtfully, "it'll take me about two weeks to get through with it, but I'm afraid it's going to take you about four years."—Green Bag.

Eau De Cologne.

This famous scent has been in use for two centuries. The great "4711" firm in Cologne which manufactured it has just closed down; but the supply available is practically unlimited still. Though Cologne has the credit for its manufacture, it was indebted for the secret recipe to an Italian immigrant, Farina.

Valiest Bird.

At Kew gardens, England, there is a heron that must be the valiest bird alive. It asks to be photographed. If it sees a camera it poses as if to make itself an attractive "subject." It has been known to stare at a camera and follow the owner of it until the camera has been duly "snapped." Then it contentedly toddles away.

A NICE YOUNG MAN

In the face of the somewhat needlessly vehement protests by Holt N. Winfield that he is not a gentleman farmer, The Freeman insists that Mr. Winfield is both a gentleman and a farmer, just as are thousands of other men in Ulster county who are not candidates for Member of Assembly on the Democratic ticket with the endorsement of the Anti-Saloon League and Brother Miller of the Reform League. Most farmers are gentlemen in their conduct, as are most men in other occupations. In fact it is mainly the lunatic fringe of criminals and intemperate zealots who are not gentlemen.

True, few of the Ulster county gentlemen who are farmers enjoy Mr. Winfield's advantage of ample inherited wealth, combined with that peculiar political stand that makes them the choice of the Democratic and Prohibition parties, with the approval of Brother Anderson, Brother Miller and Brother Chase, but as few of them are aspiring to public office, this lack makes little difference.

The Freeman respects the gentlemanly qualities of Mr. Winfield and the high moral plane on which he lives. It also respects the same qualities in Simon B. Van Wagenen, who to all these good qualities adds that of experience in the public service and an unswerving desire to represent correctly the opinions of the great majority of his constituents intelligently and efficiently, regardless of whether or not his action meets the approval of "Al" Smith.

Mr. Winfield has committed himself to the Smith program, whatever that may be, and seeks election in order that it may be carried out. Governor Smith is a New York city man, with all the narrowness of the great city and all the contemptuous disregard for "upstate" that the average Tammany politician possesses. From this we may judge the nature of the "program" that Mr. Winfield declares he will support.

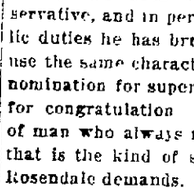
The conclusion is unavoidable that it requires something more than being a nice young man to become a useful and creditable representative of Ulster county in the Assembly.

Fred DuBois is fully representative of the important business, agricultural and fruit-growing interests of the town of New Paltz, and his nomination by the Republicans of that town for supervisor is in full recognition of pre-eminent qualifications for membership in the county legislature. Mr. DuBois has been active in the cause of every industry of the town and in his business relations with every resident has shown a scrupulous regard for their rights and interests. His experience is needed in the conduct of town affairs and in the business of the county, in whose legislature he may be depended on to serve at all times the best interests of the taxpayers. He is fully acquainted with the town and its varied needs and as supervisor he will give both town and county a clean, business-like administration.

Frank M. Brink has proved himself a worthy representative of the voters of the town of Ulster, and his renomination by the Republican party as supervisor is an acknowledgment of his successful administration of the town's business. In the county legislature he has occupied an influential position because of his experience and sound judgment, and the town and county have benefited thereby. Ulster's rapid growth shows the need of continuing in the important office of supervisor a representative on whom such absolute dependence can be placed. Good management of town business is of direct benefit to every resident of the town. During the years he has conducted town affairs, Mr. Brink has shown broad-minded ability of high order, absolute integrity and a sincere desire to furnish his constituents the best things obtainable at the least expense. Sound judgment and sound management have enabled him to carry this policy in effect, and in his re-election the voters of the town of Ulster serve their own best interests.

Among the voters of the town of Woodstock, George H. Elwyn has gained the confidence of everyone with whom he has come in contact, and his nomination for supervisor by the Republican party furnishes opportunity to the people to entrust their public business to a representative whose integrity, ability and common sense are everywhere recognized. Mr. Elwyn has grown up with the town, the interests of the town are his own interests and full dependence can be placed on him to keep the town on a business basis. Natural pride in the town where a man was born induces him to even greater efforts to deserve the commendation of his constituents, and Mr. Elwyn's entire life shows that reliance can be placed on him to supply the town with a clean, honest and efficient administration. He is thoroughly familiar with the town's needs and his loyalty to the town will never be shaken. His election by a large majority will be a matter of pride to Woodstock township and to the county of Ulster.

Silas S. Auchmoody has proved repeatedly to the town of Rosendale his ability and careful forethought in securing for that town the important improvements which the town has desired, and his re-nomination by the Republicans for the office of supervisor shows their appreciation of his worth. Mr. Auchmoody is well acquainted with town affairs and during nearly three years in which he has filled the office of supervisor has demonstrated his value as a member of the county legislature. He is the type of public official who believes that public office is a public trust, and lifelong residence in the town has been improved in becoming thoroughly acquainted with the town's needs. Whatever effort has been necessary to secure for the people what they want, he has given cheerfully and faithfully. In the conduct of his own business Mr. Auchmoody has been careful and conservative, and in performing his public duties he has brought into active use the same characteristics. His renomination for supervisor is a matter for congratulation. He is the kind of man who always makes good, and that is the kind of supervisor which Rosendale demands.



That Body of Yours

WHERE DOES YOUR HEADACHE?

These are of such frequent occurrence and are always called by the same name, that I often wonder more thought is not given to their causation. They certainly make life miserable.

Now these headaches are not due to the same cause always because the "ache" may be in different parts of the head.

There is the neuralgia about the upper part of the face and forehead, sometimes over the nose and cheek and down into the lower jaw. Now just one nerve is causing any or all of that disturbance according to the part affected.

The "flu" epidemic left a lot of these forehead aches in its train. Then there is the "ache" at the back of the head running right up into the crown, which is due to something irritating another nerve.

Something has gotten into the blood stream and the nourishment to the nerve is thereby impaired.

Sometimes in anaemic, or thin blooded people, it is the actual poverty or poor quality of the blood that is at fault.

Frequently headaches are due to eye strain, or even active disorders in the eye itself.

The relation of the intestine to headache and the prompt relief from same by the proper evacuation thereof is so well known that comment is unnecessary.

Following colds and the grip, a very definite headache is now prevalent.

The pain is in the forehead between the eyebrows and is very intense. Sometimes the skin is actually painful to the touch.

This form of headache often calls for intervention by a nose specialist.

It would be impossible to give a general treatment for headache, for as you see there are so many different causes for it.

You can never go wrong in the treatment of all forms by paying attention to the daily evacuation of the intestine. Constipation accompanies nearly all forms, although not the cause of them all.

Then if the trouble be in or above the eye, have a real examination by an oculist.

If between the eyes following a cold or grip the usual soothing sprays up the nose may be of help. If the pain persists, see a nose specialist who may illuminate the hollow bone and see if there be any obstruction.

For the painful points in the head, gentle massage for a day or two followed by deep massage is the most effective treatment. So, if you have a persistent headache, think of its exact location, and try and figure out an effective way of controlling it.

FEATHERS NEEDED FOR HOSPITAL

Gifts of all kinds are always welcome at the Kingston City Hospital, and sometimes a hint as to what is particularly needed there is appreciated by friends of that institution. Just now, when the new private rooms are finished, there is a call for extra pillows. An old-fashioned feather-bed, of no use to the owner, would make a splendid gift to the hospital. It can be renovated and made into pillows of the proper size. Any size pillow if the feathers are of good quality, is acceptable, and the Ladies' Auxiliary will attend to the making over.

Mrs. Charles Tappen, president of the auxiliary, telephone 847, may be notified, if you have anything of this kind to give. It will be called for.

ADVANCE IN TREE SURGERY

Millions of Dollars Being Spent Annually to Salvage Things of Beauty.

Tree surgery, as it is practiced today, is less than a quarter of a century old. It was, naturally, crude in its beginnings, and the past ten years have been the era of its greatest development. It may be said that this development has closely paralleled that of the automobile. In both cases the original principle was sound, but it has taken a good many years to bring about the refinements which constitute the efficient gas-driven car and perfected tree surgery of the present day.

Among Americans no line of commercial or professional endeavor can be expected to thrive or even endure for long unless it has a sound economic justification, says E. A. Quarles. We are a practical people and things impractical make a very limited appeal. American home owners spend yearly not less than $5,000,000 in the care of their trees, exclusive of work done on them by labor in their own employ. Ten years ago it is doubtful if half that sum was spent. These figures speak forcefully in confirming the acceptance of tree surgery as an important and practical application of science to the preservation of a useful material possession of mankind.

Shade trees about the home have both an aesthetic and economic value. With many the first-named would justify any reasonable care for their preservation. Louis Fuertes, the noted painter of birds, said in a recent address that he, for one, was tired of hearing people appealed to for the protection of birds because of their economic value, great as this is. Those of us whose lives are spent with the trees and whose daily endeavors have to do with their preservation sometimes have the same feeling if we must be brutally frank, "Only God can make a tree," in the words of Joyce Kilmer's immortal verse. Do not its majesty, grace, beauty and the suggestion it gives of a link between man and the Creator furnish all the urge that is necessary to give our trees the care they deserve? Short of man himself, few creations of the Almighty so completely fill the eye and satisfy the aesthetic sense as do the trees. In practically all landscaping of any scope trees are the dominating motif. Certainly they deserve better care from man than they receive.—Arts and Decorations.

New Cadmium-Gallium Lamp.

The production of light sources from which pure monochromatic light of various wave lengths and great intensity may be obtained is from a practical viewpoint of great importance in the field of optics.

During the past month, the bureau of standards has constructed an enclosed quartz vacuum lamp using an alloy of gallium and zinc, similar in many respects to the cadmium-gallium lamp previously designed. The design of the new lamp has been so perfected that the lamp operates quite satisfactorily with very little flickering, giving several intense lines, one red and several blue and green.

Preliminary experiments have been made in connection with the production of a thallium lamp, but the results so far have not been entirely satisfactory owing to the high temperature at which it is necessary to run the lamp to prevent the thallium from depositing on the walls of the light space, thus covering up the arc. —Scientific American.

Origin of Carpets.

Hundreds of years ago, when Europeans were living in houses with bare floors or floors strewn with rushes or twigs, carpets were being used in China, India and Egypt. The first carpets were rugs to sit upon, taking the place of chairs. In Homer's time, either plain or embroidered carpets were spread before the couches of the guests in Greek houses. Later on rich and gay carpets were imported to Greece from Babylon. These carpets had raised figures of men and animals and were made in gorgeous colors. In later Roman times carpets were imported from the Orient.

ODD SEA ANIMAL

Soldier Crab and His Habits Described by Writer.

As a Terrible Glutton and Desperate Fighter—Will Battle to the Death for Home.

Of all the queer creatures that live in the sea, there is none stranger than the hermit crab, or the soldier crab, as he is sometimes called, says Mary Dudderidge. The second name is better than the first, for the hermit crab is neither pious nor dignified, as a hermit should be, and he does not live alone, as we shall see later. He is, on the contrary, a terrible glutton and a desperate fighter; for he lives in a world of hungry creatures, all anxious to eat and not to be eaten, and he does not intend to be eaten if he can by any means avoid it.

And in order that he shall not be eaten, it is first of all necessary that he shall get himself a house. Nature has been rather unkind to him, for, while all his cousins of the crab family are clad in coats of mail, and many of his neighbors in the sea are able to build themselves strong and beautiful houses, he has no tools with which to build and no armor except on the front part of his body. So he is obliged to take refuge in a strong tower that some one else has built, and in his search for it, he does not trouble himself much about questions of right and wrong. If no one has a claim on the house that he wants, well and good; but in any case, he must have a safe place to live in. If, therefore, he finds any one in possession of the covered stronghold, he does not scruple, if the unfortunate tenant is weaker than himself, to pull him out and make a meal of him. If this tenant happens to be a brother hermit, there is sure to be a royal row. The pair sometimes fight to the death, and the victor may devour the vanquished. In many cases, however, it has been observed that the upshot of the fracas is simply an exchange of shells, the defeated party taking possession of the abandoned fortress of his enemy. And after all the fuss, the victor very likely finds that the new house does not suit him and he must look for another.

The hermit crab has a great fancy for the shell of the whelk; but in case of necessity he will take up with anything hollow, even an old pipe or bottle. When shells are plentiful, however, he is as particular as any housekeeper looking for a flat. When he finds an apartment that appears satisfactory, he examines it very carefully, holding it off at arm's length, turning it around and poking his claws inside. Having finally decided that it will do, he comes out of his old shell and darts into the new so quickly that it is almost impossible to see him do it, for he has no mind to expose his soft body to the dangers of the sea. He hangs onto his old shell till he is sure the new one will do, and often changes his abode several times before he is satisfied.—St. Nicholas Magazine.

More Women Enter U. S.

For ten years there has been a steady increase in the proportion of women to men among the immigrants from all parts of Europe. Last year, for the first time since immigration statistics have been kept, there were more women than men admitted to the country. The proportion is partially explained by the fact that immigrants of former years have prospered and are now sending for their mothers, wives and daughters to join them. Despite the increasing number of women coming in there is no apparent relief for the household help problem. A trifling proportion of these women take up domestic work. Many of them enter factories. Statistics show that of the women immigrants comparatively few are trained for any kind of employment. The same condition is found among the men. A large proportion of the immigrants are classified under "no occupation." There are fewer laborers coming in than at any time in twenty years.

Use of Feldspar Growing.

The exploitation of the many feldspar deposits of the United States is all the time increasing, owing to the extensive use of this mineral in the manufacture of pottery, enamelware, enamel brick and electricware. It is also used for binding together the material of emery or carborundum wheels as well as to some extent in the manufacture of opalescent glass and artificial teeth. It is useful in the preparation of scouring soaps and window washes, because being slightly softer than glass it is not likely, as is the quartz contained in some soaps, to abrade the surface. Feldspar employed in pottery must be nearly free from iron-bearing minerals.

Woman Leads Pirates.

There recently appeared on the river at Hong Kong, much to the alarm of shipowners and their crews, a woman pirate, who has already taken a heavy toll of loot from vessels. Nothing is known of her, except the fact that she speaks English, wears a serge costume and Wellington boots, and carries a wicked-looking revolver, with which she compels her victims to surrender. Under her are a score or more Chinese brigands, who, although they are cutthroats and robbers, obey her implicitly.

Photos Detect Rash.

Photographs have shown symptomatic measles developing under children's skin days before it was visible to the eye. The camera is being studied by medical men as a means of early diagnosis of smallpox and other diseases involving a rash. People in contact with known cases could be photographed before any rash develops on the outer skin. If the camera revealed the disease on them, they could be removed to isolation before they became infective.

P.-T. A. SCHOOL NO 6 FOOD SALE OCTOBER 26

The Parent-Teacher Association of No. 6 at its meeting Tuesday afternoon decided upon October 26 as the date for the food sale to be held on the lower floor of the school building.

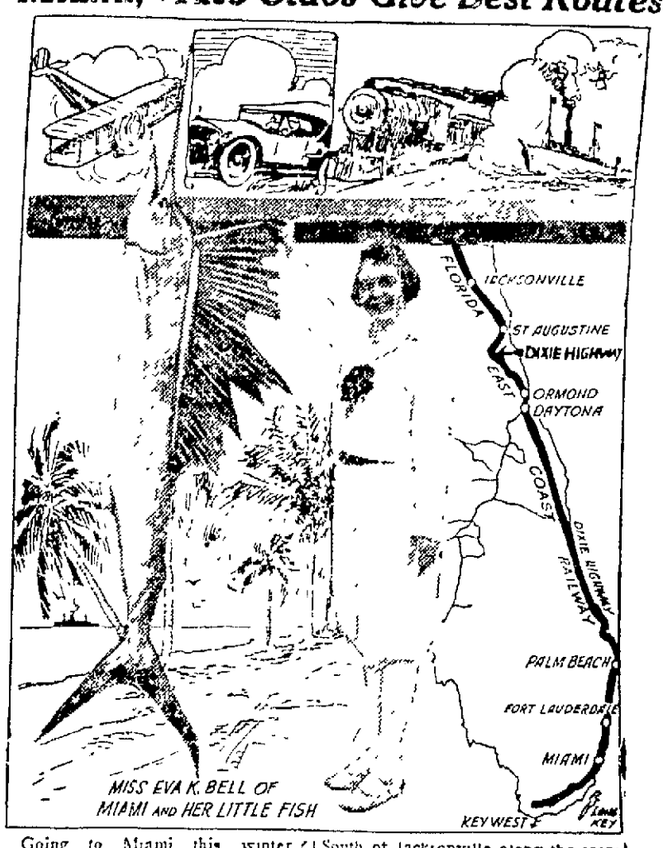
Mrs Justin Field, the president of the association gave short talks on the work done at the state convention, recently held at Auburn. At the next meeting she is to give a full report.

Those present were favored with an extra fine recitation by Maud Hopper. The mother's attendance banner for primary grades was awarded Miss Bongartz's room, for the grammar grades, Miss Freer's room.

Who Was Prometheus?

In classic mythology, the son of the Titan Iapetus and of Clymene, and brother of Atlas, Menoetius, and Epimetheus. According to one tradition, he stole fire from heaven, for which offense Zeus chained him to a rock on Mount Caucasus, where an eagle preyed daily upon his liver, which was restored on each succeeding night. Hercules finally slew the eagle, and, by permission of Zeus, released the long-suffering Prometheus. Other legends make Prometheus the creator of man out of earth and water, either at the beginning of the human race or subsequent to the deluge of Deucalion.

Fine Auto Roads All The Way To Miami, Auto Clubs Give Best Routes



Going to Miami this winter? There are fine auto roads all the way. Railroads are putting on best train service ever. Owners of yachts will go by the inland passage down the Atlantic coast. There's a houseboat in Miami that came from Minden, North Dakota, 4,000 miles. Fact is, Miami where it is always June, is expecting the biggest crowd in its history. Thousands want to avoid the big coal bills.

Best auto route to Florida from points East of Pittsburg is via the Lincoln Highway to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington; thence by the Washington-Richmond Highway via Fredericksburg to Richmond, Va.; thence Petersburg, South Hill, Henderson to Raleigh, N. C. From Raleigh via Pinehurst and Aberdeen to Rockingham; thence via Cheraw to Columbia and 75 miles South via the Federal Highway to Augusta, Ga. Thence over Woodpecker Route to Millen and by Augusta-Jacksonville Shortcut to Lane Bridge, Waycross, connecting with first-class Dixie Highway all the way into Jacksonville.

The Dixie Highway follows the East coast of Florida for 418 miles South of Jacksonville along the scenic route of the Florida East Coast Railway. It has been put in good condition for winter. It passes through beautiful St. Augustine, America's oldest city. Ormond Daytona, West Palm Beach, Ft. Lauderdale and Miami, way down to Royal Palm Park.

From Chicago and Middle West points, the Nashville Auto Club recommends the route via Danville, Marshal, Terra Haute, Vincennes, Clarksville, Springfield into Nashville; to avoid the mountain stretch via Mounteagle and Jasper route via Murfreesboro, Shelbyville, Gadsden, Rome to Atlanta, Ga. Thence via Madison, Greensboro, Norwood and Thompson to Augusta and on into Jacksonville as routed above.

Lots of motorists go to Miami by train, buy their machine, tour the state and then sell it when they get through. There will be eight trains daily each way to and from Miami. The tourist will be able to ride direct from Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Detroit, Cleveland, New York, Boston and other centers right into the sunshine of Miami.

Everybody's goin' to Florida.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

HALLOWEEN PARTY

There had been a little girl named Janet who had wondered what the word Halloween meant.

And now it seemed as though another little girl did not know what it meant and was feeling quite sad about it.

It seems to me, too, that it is a word that we've used so often that many of us are not quite sure what it does exactly mean.

And so I am going to tell the story of Miriam and of what her mother told her just so every one will be sure to know without having to do anything about looking it up

There was going to be a splendid party at Miriam's house There were all sorts of preparations for it.

Miriam did not know whether they would all be ready on time, for there seemed to be so much yet to be finished

But probably the guests who were coming to the party were just as busy for the guests would bring some Halloween stunts with them and would doubtless be dressed up.

Of course Miriam did not know just what the guests would do, but she knew that two of her brothers were going to dress up as old witches and do all sorts of tricks

Already they were hanging apples attached firmly by strings from a doorway and as soon as the guests came and the tricks began they would all try to bite these apples, which would swing annoyingly away from them

And there was going to be a dish of flour in the kitchen after supper

"They Were Hanging Apples."

and the children were all going to try to find a twenty-five cent piece hidden there

They were going to hunt for it with their teeth! And there were apples bobbing in a great tub of water.

And these had to be caught by the teeth too Some of these held pennies!

There would be fortune telling, too, and Miriam's mother had promised to be the fortune-telling witch who would sit by her caldron which was now being made of red cheesecloth

At the bottom of it, barely hidden, there would be a flash light which would be kept going all the time, of course!

Oh, the party was going to be splendid Miriam knew that.

And yet—and yet—she wished she knew why they had a party—not that she didn't want a party! But just why was it for this evening with the strange name

"Why, Miriam," her mother said that afternoon late as she caught sight of Miriam's little worried face, "this isn't the time to look sad when we're having a party.

"What is the trouble, my darling?"

There was something in the understanding, sweet way that her mother asked her that made Miriam ask what she thought was so foolish a question.

"Mother, dear," she began, "just what does Halloween mean?"

"October thirty-first," her mother said, "is the vigil of All Saints' day, or Halloween, for hallow means a time devoted to holy purposes and een is short for evening. So that it means the evening before the religious day which is known as All Saints' day.

"But Halloween, while coming before a religious day, has always been an evening of festivity and frolic and fun for children.

In all countries they celebrate it—it is a real children's evening—though in various countries the children have their own little ways of celebrating.

"Our way though is used by children of many countries and we have make-believe witches just as they have, for in the olden days in the old countries those who were superstitious or given to imagining things not so, thought witches came out on Halloween."

And somehow, Miriam never enjoyed a party so much, for it was so nice to know just what the day meant and to know, too, that in many countries children on this very evening were having a celebration of such a weirdly, wonderful kind!

PICKLING TIME

A delicious pickle that is well liked by those who are fond of olive oil is:

Oil Pickles.—Take one hundred small cucumbers finger length in size three medium sized onions two quarts of vinegar, two-thirds of a cupful of mustard seed, one tablespoonful of celery seed one tablespoonful of freshly ground pepper, one cupful of olive oil Slice the well washed cucumbers without peeling, add the sliced onions—a small onion will make a better looking pickle—one may use a dozen or more; sprinkle with salt and set aside to stand over night. In the morning rinse off the salt and drain the cucumbers and onions. Place in a jar add the seasonings, oil and vinegar, mix well, let stand for a day or two then put into jars and seal. Keep in a cool place

Cucumber Catsup.—Peel and grate ripe cucumbers, squeezing out as much of the juice as possible. To a pint of the unsqueezed pulp use a cupful of good strong vinegar, a grated onion one red pepper finely chopped and salt to make palatable. If the pepper is not hot add a half teaspoonful of cayenne pepper Bottle and seal. This is delicious with fish in the winter when such foods are high in price.

Wild Grapes With Orange Rind.—Put the peeling of two oranges through the meat chopper add three times as much water as ground peel let stand over night Simmer for two hours the next day and let stand again over night Simmer one quart of wild grapes adding all the green ones. Put through a fruit press to remove seeds. Combine the pulp with the orange rind and to every three cupfuls of the mixture add two and one-half cupfuls of sugar, simmer until it jellies, then pour into glasses

Mustard Pickles.—To a gallon of vinegar add one half cupful of mustard and one cupful of salt, two cupfuls of brown sugar. Mix cold and drop in the well-washed cucumbers as they are gathered; cover with horseradish leaves.

D. A. R. CHAPTER DAY ADDRESS

Mrs. Daniel Wilbur, regent of Mahwenawasingh Chapter, D. A. R., of Poughkeepsie, addressed the Wiltwyck Chapter and its Saugerties guests at the celebration of Chapter Day here on Tuesday as follows:

Quoting from an address of our former president general, Mrs. Minor, "Every society should have some reason for its existence; some use to be served." This seems quite self evident and then comes the question: "What is the reason for the existence of the Daughters of the American Revolution? Why are we organized? What are we doing?"

Away back in the time of the coming to this country of our forefathers and foremothers, their reason for making this great change in their lives was a desire for freedom or liberty. For this they braved the storms and perils of a long and tedious ocean voyage. As the result of this today we live in an atmosphere of freedom and it is well to pause and consider just what freedom means.

To many people, freedom takes on the nature of license, and apparently means "doing as they please," but that is far from its true meaning.

Part of Webster's definition of freedom is "independence" and "particular privilege," and this is just what it seems to me is its true meaning in relation to the high ideals of our organization. Our constitution reads "to cherish, maintain and extend the institutions of American freedom, and if we are to accomplish this it means that we must do and encourage many things that call for independence of thought and action. As an organization of nearly 140,000 we can do much towards correcting the troubles that now perplex us, and if we rightly understand our powers and duties we shall deem it a particular privilege to be workers in this broad field.

If we would rise to the highest conception of the society's work as laid down in our constitution, we must throw our influence on the side of truth, justice and righteousness, and this, we believe, is the idea that permeates the minds of the leaders of our society.

Doubtless many of the troubles of these times are due to ignorance—not educationally—but ignorance of the true meaning of life and its responsibilities. Women are said to have a stabilizing effect on questions of the day, and many times are very farsighted. With the erratic tendencies of the times there is need for grace consideration, and with women's opportunity to work in ways that men cannot, it is fair to suppose that a society having as its objective the greatest good for the greatest number must see concrete results in the years to come. With a large society working in harmony, there must be results if we keep true to our aim and freely give of our time and energy.

The D. A. R. is a very human society, and we are all looking for ancestral lines that will permit us to secure extra bars, etc., but it must not be forgotten that while we have such privileges as members, with every privilege comes a responsibility, and that joining the organization should mean a promise to give of our best to the promotion of the ideals established by the founders of this republic, and while trying to learn something of our ancestors it should be—and I believe is—our aim to do and stand for those things that shall cause our descendants to revere our names as proudly as we revere the names of those whose deeds permit us to become members of the D. A. R.

But far above our ancestry is the idea that our organization stands for all that is true, just and right, and for the weeding out of the wild growth of socialism, bolshevism and and all other things that menace the good of our country. Other very important lines of our work are instilling into the minds of the children proper ideas of living and thinking, with due respect for the deeds of their ancestors; also the careful instruction of the foreigner that along with the privileges he receives he owes a duty to this country.

The preservation of public and private records, marking Revolutionary soldiers' graves, tracing old trails and erecting boulders and other markers are some of the valuable things the D. A. R. are doing and these, with the preservation of historic places are very worth-while, because by these means we are writing history that would never be written except for this and kindred societies. The influence of this work on our individual lives cannot be estimated, for our members who really get into the heart of organization work are broadened, strengthened and enriched and their ideas of men and things clarified, enabling them to rise to better and higher living.

In a speech before the D. A. R. congress in 1918, Secretary Lansing said that the biggest and deepest influence of this organization was "the keeping alive and creating throughout this country the spirit of patriotism and loyalty to America and American ideals" and to this may we add, the fostering of international good feeling and the spirit of mutual helpfulness.

To again quote from Mrs. Minor (and if you have not already read her address on the deeper meaning of the D. A. R., I suggest that you make it a study at one of your meetings): "The spirit of the Daughters of the American Revolution is fraternal in its nature, raising the society to the level of an order based on the mutual feeling of sisterhood and comradeship, carrying out the spirit of the Declaration of Independence. In its ideals of service and in its spirit of mutual love and helpfulness lies perhaps the deepest meaning of all, for these are spiritual."

Following along the lines of service, there is one important way by which Daughters may make their influence left very strongly and that is by the proper use of the ballot. You may be timid about going to the polls to vote, but be sure of this: The right of suffrage is more than a right; it is a responsibility and a duty, with a wider outlook than our ancestors had, we see things in a far different light, and what seemed to them as proper, and we are free to follow the leading of our conscience when we are inclined to take a stand for what we believe to be for the good of mankind in general. We must interest outselves in who shall be our law-makers and in those whose duty it is to enforce those laws. If our ideals have any value, they call for the enforcement of law, or if a law cannot be enforced, its repeal, for a law that cannot be enforced has no place on the statute books.

One very important work is looking into what is being taught in our schools. We know, without a doubt, that there are some teachers in our public schools and colleges who are not loyal, for while teaching history as it is written, in their talks to pupils speak disparagingly of the noble men who were so prominent in the making of our great country. This is essentially women's work and it is to her we must look for the methods by which we may rid the institutions of learning of these disloyal ones. With this same idea of service we can hardly choose a better line of work than that arranged by our national and state leaders.

We have nobly followed them in the Liberty loans, Belleau Wood, the work at Tjilelloy, the international scholarships, and all the wonderful efforts of the past, and now we must still follow their leadership, to the end that we may do better and greater things in the future.

I will mention some of the lines on which the national and state officers have deemed it best to concentrate our efforts for the year just beginning:

In addition to those above mentioned comes one of our newest departments, Ellis Island. This work being confined to the women and children seems eminently fitting for our society to take in hand, for a woman can better understand the longings of a woman—a stranger in a strange land—denied the home she has worked and hoped for, even though it be but temporary, detained for reasons she cannot quite understand. They have their ideals and to them they mean as much as do ours to us. This is but an instance of sisterly interest, for after all, "The colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady are sisters, under the skin."

If we can do no more than send the $2 asked from each chapter, we shall be doing a good work, but there can hardly be a chapter whose members cannot collect a generous package of cotton and wool for crocheting and knitting—not forgetting the necessary needles—as well as material for sewing, patchwork, rag rugs, etc.

In addition to the money we send for publishing the Manual for Immigrants, there is the splendid opportunity of placing it in the hands of the foreigner now in our country, but by all means see that instruction is given as to its meaning and value. My own chapter insists on this, and we are placing about 200 this year through the medium of the night schools, the principal being very enthusiastic over them. We did this two years ago and found them very gladly received. In this manual we are surely finding a way to the hearts of the foreigner, for in it he learns not only what he may receive, but what he must give, thus putting a higher value on the book, for what it costs us generally gives the article its value.

Then one of the worth-while efforts is Tamassa. I much regret that it was not possible for me to attend the dedication of the New York Cottage, thus missing its inspiration, but this I know from hearing the report of our state regent that this is one of the things we are doing, the results of which can never be fully measured "till the sun grows cold, and the stars are old, and the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold." We are giving these mountain girls opportunities for self-development that shall have its effect not alone on those who receive this instruction, but on generations yet unborn. The simple things that please them, their hunger for ever a common school education, their desire to "do things" for their own families, shows an ideal they hope to reach "some day," and we who are helping them upward will surely receive our reward in the furtherance of gaining our own ideals.

Then for our state. As you know at the New York meeting in Washington it was voted that this state assume the responsibility of raising the money necessary to pay for and endow the second bell in the chimes to be placed in the tower of the building now being erected in Valley Forge to the memory of Robert Morris, who rendered such valuable financial aid in the War of the Revolution. Pennsylvania had already taken the first, but ours cannot properly be called the second for it is the same size as the first and is called "one of the twins."

New York bell is to cost $5,000, which includes its perpetual care and ringing, and this will be financed by a per capita tax for two years. The sweet tones of these chimes will sound over a wide stretch of country and so long as metal lasts, will represent an ideal of recognition of service rendered by this hero to his country.

There are two subjects which it seems to me it is of importance to be brought to our attention. The first is "loyalty to our organization." But I think I hear someone say "She does not know what she is talking about, for we are all loyal." But wait a minute; when we elect our state regent to that responsible office we do so with the full understanding that she will have a voice in the councils at Washington and will help fashion the policies that shall govern the society. But when we learn that something has been arranged for of which we do not approve, we are quite inclined to rebel and say we ought to have had a voice in this matter, when the truth is, we did have, through our duly elected representative, who after listening to all the arguments for and against the matter, finds it to be of importance and for the best interests of the majority, so voted "yes."

Then the flag. Have you ever been in a foreign country and as you passed down a street, looked up and seen the stars and stripes floating from the top of a building, You did not perhaps realize that you were near the consulate, but what a thrill it gave you to see the flag of your country.

But had you seen this same flag draped, festooned or otherwise misused on the wall of a building or elsewhere, would you have felt the same thrill as when you saw it floating free. I do not think your feeling would have been the same.

It is very much against my wishes that there is any draping of the flag at any of the D. A. R. functions in Poughkeepsie, but my protests are met with "but it is sanctioned by Washington and even our own rules say it may be draped inside of buildings."

I believe you will agree with me when I tell you that we need all the influence that can possibly be brought to bear on this matter, working steadily year after year—for it takes years to move stubborn rocks—until there shall be legislation that will make it a misdemeanor to use the flag of our country other than freely floating, a true emblem of freedom.

If I am not tiring you by my long talk there is something I think we, as an organization with an ideal of making the world better because we have lived, should be interested in. When we "go shopping or marketing" we find so much of what we call carelessness in, not business matters, but in the people who are attending to our wants, that we sometimes become quite annoyed, to put it very mildly. I mean to tell you that in my opinion we are making a great mistake when we do not take more interest in seeing that our schools are giving the young people a knowledge of the way to use their education. We leave it to the boards of education to decide what the pupils must study, but when our high schools allow boys and girls to be graduated when they often cannot tell you what a hundred pounds of ice will cost at $6 a ton, without using a pencil and paper, or who does not know whether Kingston is up the river from Poughkeepsie or down the river, and various other things, then we must not expect these boys and girls to make a success of business, because they have not been educated on practical lines.

We should make it our business to supplement the work of the Parent-Teachers by seeing to it that our children are educated along practical lines. In a comic paper I recently saw a little thing that perhaps will illustrate my point. A young girl was telling her grandmother about her approaching wedding. The grandmother said, "But, my dear, are you fitted for marriage?" The reply was, "Yes, grandmother, 17 gowns." Another sweet young thing, when grandmother said, "I do not believe you know what a needle is," replied, "Of course, I do. It is something absolutely necessary to a victrola."

But in the last analysis. If we truly understand the meaning of this organization, then will our hearts and hands respond willingly to the work arranged for us by our leaders and we will not allow the smaller things that naturally arise in the life of every chapter to distract our minds from the real, true ideals of service to our fellowman, which I believe to be the fundamental idea of our organization.

HEALTH LAWS AID CHILDREN

Physical Education Made Compulsory in Some States.

LIST OF NEW ACTS PASSED

New York led in health legislation adopted during the sessions of recent months of the lawmakers of fourteen states, according to James A. Tobey of the National Health council. The greater number of the measures in this state, aside from purely local measures, embraced foods and drugs, tuberculosis, child welfare and municipal health.

Of the measures enacted into law those dealing with municipal health and treatment of tuberculosis were most numerous, aside from a generally favorable enactment of state measures conforming to the provisions of the federal Sheppard-Towner maternity act. New statutes dealing with child health are being closely studied by officials of the American Child Health association, which, under the presidency of Herbert Hoover, has been acting as a clearing house for information about improved methods of child health. Several of these new laws have swelled the number of states which make physical education and inspection of children in the public school compulsory.

Laws in Other States.

What some of the states did in legislation affecting child health is summarized briefly in the following:

Arizona—Amended laws of 1917 and created a child welfare board to safeguard interests of minor children of widowed or deserted mothers. Also increases power of state board of health to improve milk supply through inspection of dairy cattle.

California—Passed law to improve condition of concentrated milk.

Connecticut—Strengthened laws providing for physical condition and inspection of health in public schools. Also law to improve milk supply.

Iowa—Passed law providing for physical education and health training in public schools. Passed measures for playgrounds. Also made sale of "filled" milk illegal.

Minnesota—Passed law for physical and health education in public schools and providing for course in these subjects in all state teacher training schools and colleges. Increased the power of state board of health over infant's homes and provided for prevention of infant blindness.

Montana—Provided for special building for treatment of child victims of tuberculosis in state sanitarium.

School Law.

Nebraska—Revised and strengthened health law regarding physical examination of school children by teachers.

North Dakota—Strengthened powers of state health department.

Ohio—Passed law for physical education in public schools.

South Carolina—Passed law for teaching of hygiene in the public schools.

Tennessee—Provided for physical education in public schools; also for courses in this subject in all teacher training schools of the state.

Wisconsin—Made general revision of health laws and passed bill for physical education in schools as well as courses for teacher training schools. Also passed bills seeking to prevent infant blindness and to reduce infant mortality. Adopted measures strengthening laws dealing with public health nursing, limiting activities of dental hygienists and midwives.

Washington—Provided for teaching of hygiene and physical education in all teacher training schools and colleges.

FINDS MASTODON ON FARM

Farmer Near Belleville, Ill., Unearths Giant Skeleton.

Excavation of a skeleton, believed to be that of a giant mastodon, has been started on the farm of Julius Reuss, near Belleville, Ill.

The University of Illinois has been notified and probably will send expert anthropologists to superintend the completion. The tusks of the animal have been unearthed and measure 5 feet in length and 6 inches in diameter. The teeth are ten inches long and five inches wide. Part of the thigh bone was found and is of unusual size, larger than usually is found in the ordinary animal. The find was about 300 feet from the Reuss residence. It is believed the mastodon existed 10,000 years ago.

SEES ODD SNAKE IN KANSAS

Farmer Reports Being Chased by Strange Reptile.

A monster snake, strange to the state of Kansas, chased Elmer Gorsuch, truck farmer, from his watermelon field, near Concordia, Kans., he asserted. Chased him out not only once but twice and meted out the same treatment to the two Gorsuch boys.

As Mr. Gorsuch entered the field the snake struck at him without warning. He dodged and the snake went after him until he left the field. The reptile is described as being five or six feet long, body as thick as a large man's arm, head shaped like that of a cobra, and Mr. Gorsuch asserts it has plenty of speed, too. To date, the snake has not been captured or killed. There are no volunteers for the job.

Damaged Wall Paper.

One woman of artistic training makes a good living by visiting the homes of the wealthy and offering to repair damaged wall paper. Her method is to place a piece of white paper over the damaged portion and then paint in the appropriate design.

Suit of Black Velvet; Fox Collar and Cuffs

Showing a very beautiful suit of black velvet heavily embroidered in bright green and red beads—collared and cuffed with red fox.

New Tea Gowns Are of Turkish Trouser Style

Lounging robes made in Turkish designs are very much like an elaborate suit of pajamas with the trousers gathered in at the ankles. This may seem rather an absurd fashion, says a fashion writer in the New York Tribune, but there was a time when pantalettes were a very important feature. Beautiful ladies then attended the opera and balls in their straight robes, short and scanty, beneath which dangled frilly pantalettes, permitting only the merest tips of tiny slippers to appear.

So it is just as reasonable to suppose that present-day women may take to wearing, in the privacy of their homes, velvet suits made on the lines of Turkish trousers. These are decidedly more modest than the pantalettes in which Nineteenth century women walked abroad.

The gowns in no way resemble the informality of the negligee, although they are generally supposed to be close of kin. The difference is marked in both line and fabric. Long and straight are these tea gowns and their materials are in striking contrast to the chiffons, gauzes, laces and ribbons in which femininity indulges itself in the dressing room. These stately robes, in which one may even dine informally, demand brocades, velvets and tissues of gold and silver.

Then there are the trailing chiffon gowns in batik designs that have become so popular, and some of our shops show Venetian robes as kimonos. These are in velvets of mellow old colorings, the entire surface painted in dull gold and silver. There is a dull red one painted in gold and lined with olive green. One of mole-colored velvet is lined with Vatican red.

Circular Panels and Flounces Brought Out

So anxious have the French designers been to avoid mistakes and to please fastidious Americans that many of them have settled on a compromise in design. This they have effected by giving straight lines a circular treatment.

This may sound incongruous, but there is truth in the statement that nothing is impossible to a French dressmaker. It has been accomplished by the use of circular panels and flounces on straight-line fall frocks. Circular bands and loops without number are employed and the skirts are often gathered or given a circular effect by a slash at the front or one side. Similar decorations are given below a straight-line bodice by wrapped skirts and the apron at front, back or sides is frequently utilized in a similar manner. Circular insets of fur and over-tunics offer opportunities for like effects.

Length is likewise compromised by uneven hem lines, longer at back than front or trailing at the sides. Here, too, the ever-present apron comes into play. Skirts for daytime dresses are generally of moderate length, however.

Stenciled Walls Add to Appearance of Home

Colors for stenciling can be bought in various shades at almost any paint store. Get a short bristled brush and before painting starts, see that your colors are thinned as directed. Trim your stencils at the top and side if you are stenciling a frieze about the top of your wall. In this way you can get near the ceiling and into corners. Thumb tacks should be used to hold the stencil flat against the wall. When you put the color on, use a rotary motion, like scrubbing, and be sure to keep your stencil clean, for that is one of the secrets of successful stenciling. Every time you take it from the wall, lay it on a sheet of clean paper and wipe off with a soft cloth.

The Pride of a Well-Dressed Woman

EVERY well-dressed woman takes great pride in the dainty, fresh appearance of her personal wash garments.

It is often difficult to get good results with ordinary starch that forms a sticky jelly when it cools. For this pasty starch clots and smears when you try to iron clothes.

All this is now overcome with Linit, the remarkable new starch discovery.

Linit is a scientific starch—distinctly different from ordinary, old-fashioned starches. Linit gives that soft, pliable finish to all fabrics, making even cotton goods look and feel like expensive linen.

Linit makes a THIN, "MILKY" MIXTURE free-running like water, which is quickly absorbed by the fabric, thus saving the time and labor of "smearing on", which was customary with the old-fashioned starches. The Linit mixture does not present the stiff, jelly-like appearance of ordinary starch. This is why you will find it easier to iron with Linit.

LITERALLY DRESSED TO KILL

Warriors of Old Were Dandies in Their Costumes, but Famous Fighters in the Field.

The Greeks won the battle of Marathon by a lucky fluke and were dazed at their good fortune, for never before that day had they dared to face the terrible Persians, whose noblemen, formidable warriors, clad themselves in canary yellow silk trousers, embroidered with meandering jade green vines sprayed with blossoms crimson and blue; their pink silk jackets were adorned with appliqued lions and tigers, elephants and rhinoceroses, ostriches and peacocks of the gayest hues; they cased their throats with triple and quadruple necklaces of gold filigree set with every jewel known and their arms in similar bracelets and armlets by the dozen; their fingers were loaded with rings; their turbans blazed with jeweled aigrettes; the hilts and scabbards of their scimitars were encrusted with diamonds, emeralds and rubies; yet they were always ready to wade ankle deep in gore or knee in mud, at any crisis of battle or match.

The traditions of such fashions have, in many years of the world, lasted almost or even to our days. The boyars of Muscovy, the princes of Poland, the magnates of Hungary upholstered themselves with wadded coats sewed all over with seed pearls, such as the famous diamond-encrusted heirloom coat of the Esterhazy family, which, according as one tale or the other turns out to be true, was either successfully hidden from Bela Kun and his communists or treacherously betrayed to them and by them scissored into salable snippets.—Exchange.

That Is Practically the Advice That Writer in Western Newspaper Gives to Men.

Man, left to his own devices when his wife goes on a summer vacation, is inclined to be a little wild. He makes an evening meal of such an unholy combination as sardines and crackers and onions from the backyard garden; so we learn from a suburban married friend who is occasionally left to his own devices.

The unbalanced ration makes its grisly appearance at once as soon as the thoughtful care of the guardian of the household is withdrawn.

If summer vacations lasted very long, to what state of wretched malnutrition would home-staving man be reduced, removed as he may be from the life-saving station of a fair-to-middling restaurant for morning and evening sustenance?

Breakfast and supper out of a box, in many instances. Why should not man add to his accomplishments in sports the art of simple cooking? That also is a sport if practiced only on occasion.

The more complex, of course, the sportier. Amateurs have been known who did not hesitate at lemon jelly cake however much those invited to share it may have. And what a victory to achieve a really edible one! It is really as inspiring as a triumph in golf or tennis.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Romance Gone From Gold Fields.

Gold stampedes have lost their romantic trappings. An honest-to-goodness stampede after real gold has just taken place in Batavia and Kameelboom district, South Africa.

There were no six-guns, such as distinguished the mushing for precious metal in the western states and Australia. Boots, spurs, liquor, gambling paraphernalia have gone by the boards.

None of those once necessary adjuncts to the proper staking of a claim remain essential. Stampeders of 1923 traveled in automobiles and motorcycles.

Within two hours of the time the first stake was planted the field had been entirely covered. The show was over and nobody was killed.

The new field is confidently expected to produce gold, but the least observing can see that it will never produce a Bret Harte.

African Grapes Sent Here.

Dried black grapes are being produced in South Africa at the present time solely for the purpose of supplying the requirements of the American market, the growers hoping for a minimum price of from 10 to 11 cents per pound delivered in New York. Consul Charles J. Pisar, Cape Town, informs the Department of Commerce. According to South African authorities the 1922 crop of dried black grapes amounted to 850 tons, while the growers hope for an estimated yield of 1,300 tons this year. It is said that the shippers of these grapes are going to the utmost trouble in order to have the very best possible quality produced, and there seems no doubt that the quality of this season's output shows a marked improvement over the output of last year.

Once Upon a Time.

Once upon a time there was a woman who said to another woman, "There is something you should know, but I cannot tell you now," and the other woman did not insist upon hearing it right then and there, but maybe you would rather hear a true story.

HUDSON RIVER FISHERY CROP

A statement by the conservation commission says:

In the Hudson river the total catch by net fishermen for the year amounted to 745,856 pounds with carp leading in number of pounds taken, 298,143. Hudson river carp command higher prices than those taken from other waters of the state. Ninety-five per cent of the carp taken in the Hudson is delivered alive in the fish markets of New York city, where live carp has brought as high as thirty cents a pound. The average price of dead carp is from six to eight cents per pound.

Hudson river shad, long famous for their abundance and excellence, through various causes were almost exterminated about ten years ago, the total yearly catch in 1915 falling to 24,209 pounds. Since that date efforts have been made by the conservation commission to bring back the shad in the Hudson river by restocking and for a number of years past one million young shad have been planted in the river each spring. The total reported catch in 1922 was 111,678 pounds, which, while very much smaller than the old time catches, was nearly five times as large as the catch in 1915. While shad have been declining in the Hudson, carp have been increasing, the 1922 take being more than double the size of the take in 1913.

Herring, once so numerous in the Hudson river that they sold for ten cents a dozen in the markets of Albany and Troy, have been declining and the total take for 1922 was only 73,431 pounds. Sturgeon, formerly one of the most abundant and popular of food fish through the Hudson valley, contributed only 29,454 pounds to the 1'22 catch. Other fish taken in the Hudson in 1922 were bullheads, 40,116 pounds; striped bass, 5,436 pounds; eels, 14,657 pounds; tomcod, 1,637 pounds; perch, 36,541 pounds; pickerel, 1,647 pounds; suckers, 129,230 pounds; sunfish, 3,886 pounds. Hudson river fishermen reported as a total return on their fish $119,327.62, or an average price per pound of over sixteen cents.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to serious complications.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

An Intelligence Test For Women

MENTAL experts often ask the simplest question to test and grade one's intelligence. One simple but most important question might be: "Do you know why you use the particular laundry soap you're now using?" How good your reasons are will determine your intelligence grade.

Thousands of intelligent women using Kirkman's Borax Soap know exactly why:

Kirkman's is a soap for every household and laundry purpose, as harmless to your hands as is the most exquisite toilet soap. It is free from lye to redden and coarsen the skin. And while made of the purest materials it has the most extraordinary cleansing efficiency.

* * * *

THE unique cleansing properties in Kirkman's Soap go all through and mix with every atom of water in your washtub. And these properties soak into and loosen all dirt in your clothes. The clothes at the very bottom of the tub are being prepared and purified in the Kirkman Soap water so that when you lift them, only a few rubs are needed to make them as clean as new.

Intelligent women know WHY they insist upon Kirkman's Soap whenever they buy soap. There's none better at any price. For the sake of your hands buy a bar today and note what a saving in time and labor it will make.

YOUR HANDS WILL BE GRATEFUL

ASPHALT COSTS LESS THAN WILLITE

According to Figures Compiled After Summer's Work With New Asphalt Plant of City by Superintendent Darrow.

Henry B. Darrow at last week's meeting of the Kiwanis Club gave one of the club's customary vocational talks, describing the work done under his supervision, he being superintendent of the board of public works of Kingston, in charge of maintenance and construction of streets, sewers, etc. Incidentally, he gave some figures on the comparative cost of Willite and asphalt pavement.

He spoke as follows:

You have asked me to give a talk on city affairs. Far be it from me to make any kind of a speech, but I have jotted down a few items you will be interested in and will give you an idea of what kind of work is being done by the board of public works. As you will see from the many classifications it could be called "Jack of All Trades"—Collection of ashes, garbage, construction of streets and sewers, cleaning of streets and sewers, maintenance of streets and sewers, oiling of streets, care of police standards and street markings, operation of the quarry and crusher, operation of new asphalt plant, removal of leaves and snow and ice.

Places to dispose of ashes are limited and the cost of removal each year is increasing due to length of haul and growth of our city. Same applies to the collection of garbage. In the removal of ashes, we have eight single rigs and helpers and on removal of garbage five teams the year round.

Construction and Maintenance of Streets and Sewers—We all know that everybody is in favor of good street, especially the automobile owners, and every house should have sewer connections, so that our city should be the best to live in. It means money, but health is more important. You and I may have to put up more, but we may be healthier, live happier and longer and will not be afraid to raise children in a clean place. Some time ago some one started planting poplar trees along our streets. I suppose some of you have trouble with your sewer blocking up and have been placed to considerable expense to have the plumber come and take out the roots. Roots of all trees may penetrate your sewer lines. Sometimes these roots have gone so far and so deep as to penetrate and block the main sewer in the street. Then the city has to have the roots removed. Some property owners have no trouble with their sewer till there is a heavy rain. On investigation it is found the leaders from the roof are connected on the sanitary sewer line and there are just enough roots in the service pipe to keep water backed up, since the rainfall is greater than the run off. They get it in the house from the sinks and bowls. Repairing of the streets, due to cuts by plumbers for sewer and water connections and by the gas company for gas connections, is one of the discouraging pieces of work. When a street is to be improved, every property owner on it is served with a notice to make all necessary connections and set curb to line and grade. Some owners have not made the necessary improvements and they probably will not have a chance now for years to come unless you want them to destroy your streets. Property owners will find it to their advantage to make the necessary connections when notified, because they can demand a better price for the property if they sell. If the one buying finds he has to pay a good round sum for opening the street for the necessary connections, he will hesitate before buying that piece of ground. It is justice to the tax payers. The one who is building thinks it an unjust burden, but he should find these things out when buying on improved streets, and make the deal for the property accordingly.

Street markings, safety zones, traffic lights and beacons are at present taken care of by the board. I know we have have one of the best marked cities and I am glad today we have a man who is interested in his work and willing to undertake all care of this work alone.

Oiling of streets—It seems that every one wants oil and some want it who do not need it. This year where possible we tried out the method of oiling only one half the street one day and giving it time to soak in, dry out or run off, before placing oil on the other side. There are times when oil is a good thing for a road surface as a preservative and again when oil is destructive to a road surface.

Flushing of streets has been done at night so as not to interfere with business and splash water on the valuable dresses in the daytime or in other words it is done when all respectable people should be home in bed. Even then complaints come in about noisy motor, etc. disturbing slumber. Such things must cause some inconveniences and are unavoidable. The only remedy is to change location of operations.

In the fall and winter we have our troubles with the leaves and snow. The leaves have to be gathered up or our sewers would be clogged and it takes some time for them all to fall and be gathered in.

As you know last winter we did have some trouble with the snow and ice. We worked to keep business going and have streets opened for fire trucks to all parts of the city.

Through the kindness of County Superintendent of Highways James F. Loughran we made good use of county tractor in keeping the roads opened in and outside of the city.

One of Kingston's investments is the stone quarry and crusher. We are able to get our own stone when wanted and also supply the local contractors and individuals at reasonable prices.

The asphalt plant, the new undertaking entered upon this year, was obtained with the idea of making all necessary repairs to the Willite pavement and replacing pavement where cuts were made for water, sewer and gas connections and also to build a few new streets to see how the cost would compare with cost of Willite. I will give you some comparative costs, so you can judge for yourselves whether or not it was a wise move. Having no cost of Willite this year I am using last year's contract price on Broadway in comparison to cost of asphalt on Main and Fair streets:

Name of Street	Sq. Yds.	Cost	Cost Per Sq. Yd.
Wall	9900	$17,925.24	$1.80
Elmendorf .	9065	20,329.77	2.24
Abruyn ...	4910	10,590.69	2.16
E. Union ...	902	1,965.59	2.18
Main and Fair,
On brick .	2703	3,188.77	1.18
	27,480	$54,000.00

Willite cost $2.25 per square yard. The cost per square yard includes all work done by city's forces and the materials used both in preparation of the sub-grade and placing of burden and top courses. The difference in cost per square yard between Wall street and the other streets is due to the extra heavy excavation necessary to prepare the latter streets for asphalt pavement, and increased wages to men at the time Wall street was being completed.

Sheet asphalt pavement on Wall street, Elmendorf street, Abruyn street and East Union street consisted of two courses. The first course known as the binder course was one and one-half (1½) inches in thickness and consisted of sand, stone and asphalt mixed hot. Each batch consisted of: Sand, 225 lbs.; stone, 470 lbs.; asphalt, 55lbs. The second course known as the top course was one and one-half inches in thickness and consisted of graded sand, cement and asphalt mixed hot. Each batch mixed consisted of: Graded sand, 535 lbs.; cement, 60 lbs.; asphalt, 105 lbs.

The pavement on Main and Fair streets was placed on brick after they had been turned. This is same method used with the Willite on Broadway. When the Willite was placed the city had to pay the additional cost of turning the brick and all other preliminary work. The figure on Main and Fair streets includes all work done.

PRESBYTERIAN PASTOR OPENLY APOLOGIZES TO CATHOLICS

For Burning Cross Under Guise of Protestantism.

The Rev. Dr. Robert O. Kirkwood, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, at Middletown, N. Y., apologized in public Monday night to his Catholic townsmen that the placing of a burning cross in front of St. Joseph's Catholic Church here on Saturday night was done under the guise of Protestantism. He said the act was the natural fruitage of the Klan spirit as it is generally understood. "I am unspeakably ashamed and sorry as a Protestant and as a citizen," he said, "that this mean and wicked thing has been done, and I most humbly apologize for myself and all right minded Protestants to the Roman Catholic Church that this thing has been done under the mask of Protestanism. Here in our little city, where we all know each other so well, where we are so interdependent, where unity of action is so necessary for our welfare, the seeds of hate and division have been sown, and the crowning sin is that this has been done under the symbol of the holy cross."

Help the Fallen.

Let him who neglects to raise the fallen, fear lest, when he falls, no one will stretch out his hand to lift him up.—Saadi.

In addition to the all-star cast that includes Brandon Tynan, Mary Carr, Faire Binney and William Collier, Jr., Postmaster General New, himself, appears in an important role in the picture.

The public generally will be greatly pleased with and interested in the plot and exciting scenes of this film. The post office employes and their families and friends are looking forward to seeing "Loyal Lives." No more faithful body of men and women are to be found than these workers rendering service so important to our country's prosperity and progress. Their burdens can be lightened by patrons after witnessing this interesting and exciting drama of the post office.

CURRENT OFFERINGS AT THE THEATERS.

"Up She Goes," which William A. Brady brings to the Kingston Opera House tonight, is a musical piece of rare quality. It has a deliciously humorous story which lends itself admirably to the score by Harry Tierney and Joseph McCarthy, composers of "Irene" fame.

"The Brass Bottle," Maurice Torneur's fantastic comedy drama from the novel of the same name by F. Anstey, English author, will be the First National screen novelty featured at Keeney's till Saturday. Interpreted by an all-star cast, including Harry Myers, Ernest Torrence, Charlotte Merriam and Barbara La Marr, the story revolves around the adventures of a struggling young architect who releases a genie from a brass bottle in which he has been confied for many thousand years.

There is a complete change of program starting today at The Orpheum Theatre—six vaudeville acts, featuring Zita, "the girl who sees without eyes." She can see blindfolded all that can be seen with the naked eye. The medical profession has not been able to solve the mystery of how she does it. The feature picture today is the latest Fox production, Charles (Buck) Jones in "Snowdrift." Tomorrow's feature, Shirley Mason in "Shirley of the Circus."

THE HOME COUNTY MAGAZINE FOR NOVEMBER

In The Home County Magazine for November out this week, Robert E Sherwood, perhaps the greatest clown of his day and for over 25 years with the Barnum Shows, begins a series of articles on the "Outside and Inside of the Circus Tents," that will take one back to the glamour of youth. Mr. Sherwood is not only an encyclopedia of circus lore but a master of diction.

This number in the Greene County section will also contain a personal interview with Mayor Hylan, in which the Mayor tells how he left Hunter with $3.50 and landed in Brooklyn with but $1 50 in his pocket, climbed an elevator structure, secured a job as laborer, afterward becoming a fireman, and later an engineer. While holding the throttle he studied law and a short time after beginning the practice of his profession was appointed a magistrate, then a county judge and later elected to the latter office by so substantial a majority as to make him a possible candidate for mayor Whether one agrees with the policies of Mayor Hylan or not the fact remains that he is a shining example of American democracy.

The sketch of the career of Charles H. Post, who came from Ellenville, is a very interesting one Today Mr. Post is recognized as one of the leaders in the insurance world, being president of the American Caledonian and United States manager of the Caledonian Company There is also a fine article on Howard W. Connelly, superintendent of the second class delivery of the New Pork post office. Mr Connelly came from Orange county.

IS A POWERFUL DISINFECTANT

Ozone Many Times Stronger Than Many of the Agents That Are In Common Use.

Ozone is a powerful bactericidal agent, and can be used as a disinfectant in place of sulphur dioxide, formaldehyde or hydrocyanic acid. In fact, it is 160 times as powerful a disinfectant as sulphur dioxide, 37 times as formaldehyde, and nearly twice as powerful as hydrocyanic acid gas, writes Floyd W. Parsons in the World's Work. As a deodorant it has no superior. In the case of delicate odors, it destroys them, while with stronger odors it acts as a masking agent, due to its action on the olfactory membrane. When high concentrations of ozone are used, even the most powerfull odors are destroyed.

As to the effect of low concentrations of ozone on the human body, there is considerable evidence coming to hand which indicates that the ozone is not only harmless, but that its effect on the individual is beneficial. Medical research has developed the fact that when obectionable odors are present in the air people breathe, their respiration is depressed and the result is a deficient oxidation of the blood. Therefore, whether ozone really masks an odor or completely destroys it, the effect is healthful because the individual breathes more freely and fully. In other words, when bad odors are present in the air, there is an involuntary contraction of respiration, of which bodily reaction the individual is entirely unconscious.

RED HAIR IN MEN AND WOMEN

Altogether Charming on the Fair Sex, Says Writer, but Seldom on the Sterner.

An English writer has recorded the following observations about red hair:

"With apologies to any male friends of mine (I cannot remember many) who may have been entitled to the name of Rufus, I am bound to say that I never knew any man who would not have looked better with hair of any other color," says Prof. Saintsburg in "A Scrap Book."

"On the other hand, red hair in girls and women is often—I think much more often than not—perfectly charming. Brick-dust red, with no gloss, is ugly enough, no doubt; but then all hair—except a very peculiar kind of black—requires gloss. Every other shade, from the lightest nasturtium to the darkest auburn chestnut, can be beautiful. This Venice knew, and, long before it, the Greeks. The Romans did not like red hair, but the Romans were people of very doubtful taste in many points of esthetics."

Cat Has Many Relations.

The unsuspecting cat has many kinsfolk in the matter of names. Conspicuous among these is the catfish. The naming of the common denizen of fresh water has been explained in more ways than one, and the reader may take his choice. One recognized authority contents himself with the statement that the name, as commonly applied to the fishes of the family Siluridae, is an allusion to the long barbels or feelers about the mouth, which have been regarded as resembling the whiskers of a cat. This explanation is widely accepted, but the other authorities set forth a probable reason for the name in the statement that when a fish of this species is captured and brought to the surface it makes a sound like the purring of a cat. Another offers both the barbels and the purring and throws in the added suggestion that the name was influenced by "some other fancied resemblance to a cat."

They Knew the Witness.

A circuit judge was holding court in a small backwoods town. A local character came up for trial, took the stand in due time and spun his narrative. The judge, something of a wag, charged the jury as follows: "If you believe the defendant's statement, he is guilty. That is all."

The jury brought in a verdict of acquittal. Somewhat surprised, the judge after court asked the foreman why such a verdict was rendered.

"We thought we were following instructions, your honor," exclaimed the foreman. "We know that bird. You couldn't believe him on oath."

Lost His Opportunity.

I was strolling along with my sweetheart at a fair, very happy, until I discovered her former beau showering honeyed smiles on her. As she didn't ignore him, I became worried, and resolved to propose at once. While deciding just how, I absent-mindedly gazed at the sky and allowed her to lead the way. Finally I implored her to be my own little "dove." "I'm afraid I'd be a hungry dove," she answered; "I've led you to three ice cream stands and two lunch counters, but you just gazed at the sky, so I'm going back to Jim."—Chicago Journal.

First Punctuation Marks.

In the oldest manuscripts the words usually join each other without break or separation. Manuscripts without punctuation marks of any kind generally are accepted as predating the Eighth century. Those which have no capital or other divisions are always very old, and the fewer and easier the abbreviations, the older it is. The most ancient manuscripts still preserved are those written in Egyptian tombs. Next to them in point of age are the Latin manuscripts found at Herculaneum.

NET IS USED TO GUARD LIGHTHOUSE FROM BIRDS

Ducks, Gulls and Songsters Meet Death While Seeking Haven at St. Simond's Light.

Like the candle that attracts the moths the lighthouse on St. Simonds island, just off the coast of southern Georgia attracts thousands of birds. It has become necessary for the government to erect a large steel net around the glass in the top of the tower to save the windows from further injury and to protect the light and its powerful lens from possible destruction.

The light is of 2,200-candle power and is in a tower 104 feet high. It is visible on a clear night for a distance of sixteen miles, and according to C. O. Svenson, keeper of the lighthouse, offers as much fascination to the fowls of the air as the white lights of Broadway offer to the thousands of Americans who annually visit New York.

"During the migrating season thousands of birds fly into the net," Keeper Svenson said, "and on a dark and stormy night the net is worked overtime. Then the birds believe the light offers them a haven from the wind, but instead it lures many of them to their death.

"The lighthouse does not observe any of the game laws, but gets all the birds that come toward it. Quite often I pick up birds of rare plumage. Quite often the birds are killed outright, but some of them escape death and are either badly stunned or suffer broken wings. These I kill to end their suffering, and feel that in doing so I am showing them mercy.

"Ducks, rice birds, quail and doves often fly into the net and after daybreak I gather them up, dress them and they are soon on my dining table."

H. C. Hopkins, the taxidermist, has mounted a large variety of specimens and a visit to his home gives the impression of having walked into a bird convention.

"The lighthouse is to blame for many of the birds here," Mr. Hopkins explained.

"One morning Mr. Hopkins classified the birds picked up and in this collection were Maryland yellow throats, black and white warbler, black throated blue warbler, American red start, parula warbler, iren bird, water thrush, yellow billed cuckoo, yellow warblers, black crowned night heron, gulls of every variety, cat birds, Connecticut warblers, owls of several different varieties and several varieties of ducks.

CANNOT FIND OWNER OF $20

Finder of Bill Discovers Honesty Not So Uncommon.

City Clerk Mansfield of Northampton, Mass., is firmly convinced that there are still honest folks around in the world. Recently Mr. Mansfield and a party of friends motored to Springfield and parked in front of a theater. As Mr. Mansfield left his car he saw a new and crisp $20 bill on the sidewalk and promptly picked it up. The hour was just before the beginning of the performance and the street was crowded, but the finder decided that the money must have been dropped by a party of people who had got out of a big car just as it reached the curb.

Walking into the lobby, he presented the bill to one of the women who expressed the opinion that some of her friends might have lost it. Mr. Mansfield left his address with the woman and several nights later received a letter containing a check for $20 and explaining that a checking up among the people had revealed that the money must have been lost by someone else.

NUXATED IRON

A CAUSE OF WOMEN'S ILLS

Women Often Think They Have Heart Trouble, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, Etc., When It's Simply Iron Starvation of the Blood.

Many women believe they are weak and nervous as a result of age, worry and over work, they think that their disturbed digestion, headaches, heart palpitation, shortness of breath, pains across the back, etc., are due to some serious disease instead of the real cause—iron starvation of the blood. This is proven by the fact that when many of these same women take organic iron for awhile all their alarming symptoms quickly disappear and they become strong, robust and healthy. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living cells and tissue. Without it nothing you eat does you the proper amount of good you do not get the strength out of it.

If you are not strong and well do not wait until you go all to pieces and collapse in a state of nervous prostration, but take some organic iron—Nuxated Iron at once. But be sure it's organic iron and not metal! Be iron which people usually take and which is made merely by action of strong acids on small pieces of iron. Organic NUXATED IRON is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples and it often increases the bodily and mental vigor of weak, worn-out women in two weeks' time.

Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package and the letters N. I. on every tablet. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. At all druggists.

HOPE TO REDEEM THE ILLITERATES

Ten Million Persons in U. S. Who Cannot Read or Write.

SOME SECTIONS VERY BAD

The census takers at the beginning of each decade are supposed to ask every person in the United States this question, "Can you read and write?" Five million men and women in this country, in round numbers, answered in 1920, "I cannot." They were too honest to deny their illiteracy or, in some cases, were no doubt lacking in pride and sensitiveness about it, or were led by fear of punishment to divulge what, to many illiterates, is their dark secret. Millions, however, failed to confess and deliberately concealed their illiteracy. Some in their ignorance having the conception of Uncle Sam as a meddlesome old man, decided that their illiteracy was none of his business. Others deluded themselves into thinking that the scrawl which they could trace across the paper was writing, although no one else would ever classify it as such.

10,000,000 Illiterates in United States.

In its study of illiteracy conditions the illiteracy commission of the National Educational association has carefully analyzed the statistics gathered by the federal census bureau and has followed the matter into the states and localities whence these reports were made up. The commission is convinced that the census taken by the federal government in 1920 showing 4,931,905 illiterates, and based on the confession of the individual, is not a complete and accurate report. If a careful census were taken in which every individual should be put to the test of reading simple paragraphs in the newspapers and writing simple sentences, the number of illiterates in this country, according to the commission, would approximate 10,000,000 and the number of near-illiterates would be equally as large. Twenty million illiterates and near-illiterates in the United States! It does not take a vivid imagination to see the potentialities in this vast illiterate population, or a mathematician to calculate what they might add to the nation if redeemed.

Confused by Dollar Bill.

Some illiterates are grossly ignorant. A woman who learned recently to read and write said, "I didn't know how ignorant I was. Why, I didn't know a $1 bill from a $2 bill until I was twenty-four years of age." A teacher who taught an illiterate man of thirty exclaimed, "I didn't know such colossal ignorance could exist. I could teach Ben anything and it would be something that he didn't know. He didn't even know how many months there are in the year." An officer in the American army said in my presence in 1918, "I have three men in my company, native born, who cannot count up to four." Some illiterates have knowledge of a sort, or rather a half-knowledge, which could be speedily extended, completed and adapted to use if connected with the world through education. Davey, the great tree surgeon and author, who learned to read and write after the age of twenty-nine, is one of the numerous examples of this fact.

Inequality of opportunity was never more strikingly pictured than in the illiteracy figures on record at Washington. They tell the story of youths in one section who enjoy the best of opportunities and the tragic story of youths in another who enjoy practically none. There is a state with little more than 1 per cent illiteracy and there is a state with 21.9. There are nine states with little more than 2 per cent of its people illiterate and there are eleven states where 10 per cent of the people are unable to read and write.

Conditions Almost Barbaric.

Numerous counties in the United States have a fraction of 1 per cent illiteracy, and on the other hand, there are fifty-six counties that have more than 30 per cent and 110 counties with more than 25 per cent illiteracy. And there are counties in the United States where more than 50 per cent of the people are unable to read and write.

In the most illiterate sections conditions approach the barbaric. Marriage has no sanctity whatever and commerce is carried on through barter and trade, as when America was roamed over by savage Indians. Morality is rare in densely illiterate regions. An exchange of wives for the week-end is a practice carried on in certain of these localities. Here the currency of the country is an unknown medium of exchange, neither silver, gold nor paper money being in circulation anywhere within their precincts. It is needless to add that where the currency of the country does not circulate none of its progressive ideas will penetrate or its plans for human or national welfare prevail.

Crusade Twelve Years Old.

There are some communities where illiterate men have no chance for education unless they go to the penitentiary or join the army, but the illiteracy crusade, which started twelve years ago, is gathering momentum and has now reached most of the states. No provision was made originally in any state school system for the education of adults, and no plan existed prior to 1911 for redeeming illiterates. An individual would now and then teach some illiterate to read and write. Champ Clark used to relate to his fellow congressmen how he taught a man and his two grown daughters after the Civil war. But as a wholesale undertaking the removal of adult illiteracy has waited long. It was generally understood that when one grew up illiterate he was to remain so, no matter how bright his intellect might be or how anxious he was to learn. The school age was fixed at from six to twenty, and no one over that age was supposed to enter school. Most of the states are now making some provision for illiterates either through an organized illiteracy campaign, special schools for adults, home teachers or other methods. True, they are limiting this opportunity to foreign-born illiterates in places, leaving the native-born in illiteracy, and in others are confining the opportunity to those under certain ages.

The barrier of age to educational opportunity must crumble just as the barriers of race, sex, class and religion have given away. In some of the southern states it was once forbidden by law to teach a negro to read and write. The fight for equal educational opportunities for women in the United States was not easily won. As illustrious a personage as Benjamin Franklin was not certain that it was worth while to teach them. He wrote in his autobiography: "A question was somehow or other started between Collins and me as to the propriety of educating the female sex in learning and their ability to study. He was of the opinion that it was improper and I took the contrary side, perhaps a little for dispute's sake."

Many Eager to Learn.

The situation is distinctly hopeful as regards the eagerness of the illiterates for knowledge and their ability to learn. Even those who are said to be the most unapproachable and to care the least for knowledge, the Indian women on the reservations, could be induced to learn and could be taught the rudiments in a few months. There is no letter in the alphabet or word in the English language as difficult to form as the scrolls, whorls and intricate designs they do in bead work and with elk teeth and porcupine quills to adorn the costume of an Indian brave. They are government wards, and an order from "The Great White Father" would put every one of them under instruction.

"The philosopher, the saint, the hero, the wise, the good, the great man very often lies concealed in a plebeian whom proper education might have disinterred and brought to light," said Addison. One wonders how many geniuses might be found among these twenty million if "disinterred and brought to light" and set to serving the nation. If there should be one Booker T. Washington, Edison or Lincoln among them, although it cost $20,000,000 to bring him out, it would be worth the price.—Cora Wilson Stewart, chairman illiteracy commission, National Educational association.

POPE HITS MODERN STYLES

Stringent Rules for Women Who Seek Audience at Vatican.

As a result of the recent sensational incident when 150 women, forming a part of a deputation to the pope, were turned back from the Vatican because their dresses were low at the neck and had short sleeves, the papal major domo has issued a new set of regulations for dress when being received by the pope at the Vatican in Rome, Italy.

Women must wear dresses covering the arms to the wrist and the neck to the chin, say the regulations. The dresses must be made of thick material and not transparent, and be long enough to reach down to the ankles of the wearer. Dresses giving undue prominence to the figure are discouraged.

Gloves must not be worn, and only wedding or engagement rings may adorn the fingers of intending visitors to the Vatican, who are now submitted to three examinations, viz., first at the door, second at St. Damasco courtyard, and if they pass these posts, their invitation card is crossed with a blue mark. The third examination is made in the papal antechamber, where successful candidates receive a red cross on their cards.

Makeup of any description is strictly forbidden. Hair dye is tolerated, provided it is not of the conspicuous peroxide tint.

SERVES 54 YEARS ON JOB

Michigan Man, Engineer, Boasts of Longest Record in U. S.

Few railroad men can boast of a longer service record with one company than Philip B. Sullivan, Escanaba, Mich., engineer on the Peninsular division of the North Western road.

He will have completed fifty-four years of railroading on the 21st of this month.

Mr. Sullivan had one thrilling experience in his fifty-four years of railroading. It was on Sept. 10, 1871, the day after the great Chicago fire. The engine of the passenger train on which he was braking plunged into the Chicago river a few moments after a tug hit the bridge and broke the locks. The rest of the train did not fall.

AWARDED HIM ROYAL HONORS

American Visitor in Europe Mistakenly Accorded Deference That Is Reserved for Rulers.

A visitor to one of the hotels at Carlsbad tells the story of a man to whom the servants and the proprietor paid the most profound attention. He was royally treated, rather to the neglect of the rest of the guests.

Every time he came out of the hotel door a strip of green carpet would be rolled down in front of him and the attendants would take off their caps and bow in the most deferential and obsequious manner. Neither the visitor thus so strangely honored nor the other guests could make out what this deference meant.

At last some one looked in the printed register. There was the entry:

"James the 1st, king of Buffalo, N. Y."

Explaining Mississippi's Flow.

Motion "up" or "down" properly defined, refers to movements against the attraction of gravity or to those acting with it. Water acted upon by gravity alone always flows down hill and the Mississippi river, which rises at a point about 1,500 feet above the level of the sea, is not an exception to the rule. The statement that the Mississippi flows up hill is based on the idea that "up" is always from the center of the earth and "down" toward it. If these were the only meanings of the words then it might be said that the Mississippi river flows up hill, for the polar radius of the earth is over twelve miles shorter than the equatorial radius and as the Mississippi river extends over 18 degrees of latitude, its proper proportion of this difference amounts to more than four miles, the river's source being that much nearer the center of the earth than its mouth.

Why He Selected Motto.

A man walked into a sign-painting establishment and asked: "Can you fix up a sort of placard or house motto for me?"

"Certainly," said the painter.

"Put a border around it and beautify it a little?"

"We can do all that," the proprietor assured him.

"Make it as pretty as you like."

"What is the wording to be?"

"It's a quotation from Shakespeare. You remember Puck says: 'I'll put a girdle around the earth in forty minutes.'"

Seeing that the sign painter looked puzzled, he added: "I want it as a gentle reminder to place on my wife's dressing table."

Monasteries of Athos

One of the Famous Athos Monasteries.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

The Athos peninsula in northern Greece to which the Patriarch of Constantinople, head of the Greek church has retired because of pressure from the Turkish government, has been a land of monasteries since the hoary days when Byzantium was in power.

Three peninsulas extend into the Aegean sea from the mainland of Chalcidice like the prongs of a trident, and look as though they might be the fork with which Neptune planned to throw the island of Chios from the sea. Athos is the easternmost of the three. It is about forty miles long, varying in width from four to seven miles, and it is entirely owned and controlled by a group of monastic communities, which govern it like a separate little republic. Daphne, the port of the peninsula, is a dingy enough little hamlet, consisting of a custom-house, a post office, an inn and the quarters of the few residents. Before the World war, when the Russian branch of the Greek church functioned smoothly and thousands of pilgrims from Russia visited the Russian monasteries of the peninsula, a weekly Russian steamer put in at the little port. But lately the arrivals of the occasional Greek steamers have been the sole important incidents in Daphne's life.

For the normal man life not only in Daphne but on all Athos is uncommonly devoid of interest and incident; since 1045 it has been unlawful for a woman to set foot on the peninsula. Moreover, so far is sex discrimination extended that female domestic animals are barred. Even the eggs and milk that the good monks of Athos eat and drink must come, therefore, from farms across the border of the strange monastic republic.

As one might expect, in a world inhabited by descendants of Eve, the ban has been broken. There are legends of inquisitive empresses who were graciously prevented, at the door, from defiling certain monasteries by their intrusion. There are other legends of monasteries subjected to fasting, humility and purification by reason of some such uninvited guest.

Karyes, the Quaint Capital.

Daphne is merely the outer vestibule of Athos. To reach the heart of the community a visitor rides, preferably by mule-back, up a roughly paved zigzag trail like a rope dropped in random coils on a mountain side; up and up through terraced olive trees, past a white monastery looking pleasantly at the world from a high green shelf, past hamlets of wood to the top of a ridge. Beyond these the road drops to the village of Karyes.

Karyes, otherwise The Walnuts, is the capital of the community. It lies not under the crest of the peninsula, but midway of its long eastern slope. The ignorant newcomer runs fresh risk of incurring displeasure, even when he has left his wife behind; for in the streets of this other-worldly capital may no man ride, smoke, sing or otherwise comport himself in too self-satisfied a manner.

There is much that is quaint to interest one in Karyes—its crooked alleys, its broad eaves, its omnipresent grasses, its running water, its hanging gardens, its sudden visions of white-capped Athos or the underlying blue of the Aegean, and its grave, bearded, black-gowned inhabitants, with uncut hair tucked under black stovepipe hats; true stovepipes they are, too, having neither the brim of the West nor the upper flare of the Greek clergy.

Not all the inhabitants are gowned, however. Some wear white Albanian skirts, tasseled garters below a knee white knee, and a pompon at the turned-up tip of each red slipper. These are members of a local pretorian guard. Others are less amply kilted and trousered in different degrees of scantiness; and not a few look as pro-Greek as an American.

For many travelers the true beauty of a pilgrimage to Mount Athos is that not only do you lay up credit for yourself on high, but you do it for next to nothing. Anyone belonging to the nurse half of humanity may visit the monasteries and be gratuitously entertained so long as he cares to stay.

So many avail themselves of this charitable privilege, however, that there are degrees in the welcome extended by the monks. If, for instance, a pilgrim brings a letter from known ecclesiastical authorities, he will receive more consideration, and may even receive money for his own purposes or for others commended to the generosity of the fathers.

How Mount Athos Is Governed.

In Karyes sits the Most Blessed Assembly of the Sacred Mount—or, more briefly, the Kinotis—a very interesting body. Mount Athos has always enjoyed special privileges, whether under Byzantine emperors, Turkish sultans or its present suzerain, the king of Greece; and the monasteries have always ruled their own peninsula. Of these there are now twenty, and they administer their common affairs through a parliament even more venerable than that of London, if that body be dated from the recognition of the elective principle. Each monastery annually elects a representative to this parliament, who occupies at Karyes a house belonging to his abbey.

These houses preserve the memory of the long Turkish regime, in that they are known by the Turkish name of konak—mansion. Always roomy and substantial, and sometimes handsome, they and the gardens in which they stand add not a little to the appearance of the diminutive capital. In addition to the Kinotis, which is a deliberative, legislative and judiciary assembly, there is a smaller executive council of five, called the Epistasia.

The parliament house of Karyes is not a very imposing structure, but it makes a picturesque group in the center of the town, with the cathedral of the community and the square old tower beside it. Far more imposing is the pretorian guardsman, who stands at the gate. Four of these are attached to the service of parliament, while a larger standing army of 20 men, called serdars, scour the lonely trails of the peninsula—a sort of Old World Northwest Mounted.

When the five-fold executive of Athos signs a document, each of four of the members produces a quarter of the republic's seal, while the fifth, the secretary, locks the fragments into a handle which he keeps in his possession. Here is a precedent for checks and balances in governmental affairs that extends into the distant past.

The visitor who reaches Karyes has yet to see the real atmosphere of Athos, for it is for the monasteries that this bit of inescapable government machinery exists. At least one of the monasteries must be visited, and there can be no better selection, perhaps, than Vatopethi. The trail, narrow and stony, leads through lonely woods, first slanting up the steep backbone of the peninsula, affording romantic views of the Aegean and certain gray monastery towers at its edge, then winding down a long amphitheatrical slope to the bay, where Vatopethi stands like a medieval castle.

Life in a Monastery.

Its distant air of grimness changes as one comes down through the olive yards about it. Windows pierce the upper part of the massive stone walls and high balconies lean out on curved wooden corbels. Substantial outbuildings are scattered picturesquely among trees, their old slate roofs tinged with yellow lichen and tipped with crosses. The gay mountain water flashes past in orderly little stone canals. The very mules have an air of mildness, well-being and dignified superiority to their hony brethren from Karyes, which is not unnatural of mules belonging to one of the oldest, largest, richest and most interesting monasteries on Mount Athos.

Before the great gate, on an irregular stone bridge above a noisy mill-race, stands a cupola which shelters an icon of the Virgin. Here all who pass in or out stop and cross themselves; and here the gate-keeper greets the visitor, takes his credentials and reverently kisses its seal. From there the way leads through a vaulted passage guarded by two more massive gates into the interior court of the monastery. This itself is a place of interest, a wide irregular sloping place, overlooked by open galleries, where a domed church, a white bell-tower and sundry smaller buildings are set down at random among orange and poplar trees. Outside stairs, roofed with slate, lead to the guest-house, where an arriving guest is presented with the tray of Athos, the peninsula's unique symbol of hospitality. Its bewildering multiplicity of spoons, saucers, glasses and refreshments presents problems well-nigh insolvable by even the most seasoned globe-trotter. But sooner or later the sojourner on Athos learns, for wherever he pays a visit, to humble monk or important dignitary, the inevitable tray appears.

GYPSY DANCES WORTH WHILE

Really Interesting, According to Traveler in Granada—Women Expert With the Castanets.

It was interesting going to see the gypsy dances while in Granada. Rain had caused the bullfight to be postponed, so we drove in a horse cab out to the suburb where the tziganes live in their caves carved in the rocky hillside. You get a guide and agree to pay the gypsies 50 pesetas. There are about eight women who dance and two men who play guitars.

Some of the women dance well, better than most stage dancers, and all are experts at rattling the castanets. In the low-vaulted cave the clacking of eight pairs of castanets produces an overpowering rhythm that penetrates and pervades one's whole consciousness, bringing realization of the strange, vivid, restless, colorful genius of the ancient gypsy race.

But when a number is finished and the dancers stop to rest they are merely gypsies again. They look at their guests inquiringly and make gestures of drinking. "They want you to buy them a bottle of wine," the guide explains. So you order a bottle sent in from the little bar next door (which is doubtless under the same management). Soon, however, they want another bottle. But you tell the guide that you have come to see them dance, not drink. He explains it to the gypsies, and they laugh and go on with the dancing.

When the show is over they want to tell your fortune, and then all the neighboring gypsies flock in, carrying their babies in their arms. Each baby wants a penny. When you run out of pennies they will accept cigarets.—Chicago Evening Post.

Odd Kinship Reckoning.

The Indians of Alaska reckon kinship through the mother only. A man sets up a memorial column, not for his father, but for his mother's relatives—particularly her brother. A son has, according to their ideas, no connection with his father. A boy or young man looks to his maternal uncles for counsel and guidance. It is to them that he owes veneration and respect, and from them only he inherits property. It is the emblem of his mother's family that he carves on his totem pole, tattoos on his arms and chest and paints on his face. This custom makes it quite impossible to trace family lineage on the father's side.

Getting Attention.

The man had his window trimmed with one of these imitation snow forms in cotton batting. "Rather out of season, eh?" suggested a friend. "Maybe. But how it does make them look!"

Old Blue Law.

An old blue law is still extant in Virginia which imposes a fine of fifty pounds of tobacco on a man if he absents himself from church for one month without a valid excuse.

Chestnut Grove Moves.

Having become detached from its foundations, one of the broad slopes of Mount Bringuez, near Lodeve, France, is reported to have moved a distance of nearly a quarter of a mile. It carried with it the soil, meadows, and woods, and covered up in its passage roads and bridges that stood in the way. A chestnut grove traveled 600 feet without suffering any apparent damage, but many small lakes have formed by the damming of the waters.

World's Coldest Place.

The Province of Werchojanesk, in Oriental Siberia, is the coldest inhabited place in the world. The daily mean temperature throughout the year is 2.72 degrees below zero.

Sea Weed as Food.

There are 600 varieties of sea weed in Japan, most of which are used for food or in the manufacture of commercial articles, such as glue, isinglass and iodine.

GERMANY GLOOMY AFTER REJECTION

Three-Cornered Civil War Between Reds, Ebert Government and Bavarian Monarchists Is Newest Menace.

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Berlin, Oct 18. Ominous clouds gathered low over Germany today pointing the way to grave developments in the immediate future

Pessimism has been deepened by the summary rejection of the government's proposals by France and Belgium It is feared that the blunt action of the French and Belgians will delay a settlement of the Ruhr reparations issue.

Grave disorders were reported from various quarters Red terror grips Saxony and re-inforcements of Reichswehr are being moved into that state

Fighting which may grow into actual civil war is feared.

Bavaria, angered by the threats of the Saxon Communists, is threatening armed action.

If a clash takes place the fight would be three cornered involving communists, the forces supporting the Berlin central government and the Bavarian monarchists

ANOTHER INFANT FOUND IN RIVER AT TROY

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Troy, N. Y., Oct. 18.—Today, for the second time in three days, the body of an infant was scooped from the bottom of the Hudson river by a dredge working near the Congress street bridge.

The body of the first baby was found in an old suitcase. Today's discovery was wrapped in an old dress.

There was nothing by which either infant could be identified.

Especially at Picnics.

There is a good deal to be learned from the bees, but as a rule people are not anxious to take points from them. —Boston Transcript.

Jacob of Reading, Mass., also four grandchildren.

Catherine, daughter of the late Lawrence and Julia Dillon McBride, died Wednesday evening, October 17 at the home of her sister, Mrs. Edward H Butler, 627 Delaware avenue. Funeral Saturday morning, October 20 at 9 o'clock from the late residence and at St Mary's Church at 9 30 o'clock, where a requiem Mass will be offered for the repose of her soul. Interment in the family plot in St. Mary's Cemetery.

The funeral of Rachel A. Terpening, who died Monday last following an illness of brief duration, was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late residence, 25 South Prospect street. The Rev. George W. Grinton, district superintendent of M. E Church, officiated. The floral tributes were many and beautiful and the funeral was very largely attended, showing the high esteem in which the deceased was held by her many friends and acquaintances. The casket bearers were four nephews of the deceased: Selah, Mont and Chester Terpening and William Acker. The interment was in the Rosendale Plains Cemetery, where the Rev. Mr. Grinton conducted the committal services.

Honor Among Chinese.

It appears that there is a very high sense of honor among Chinese, writes Henry Crosby Emery, LL. D. So is there among the merchants of America, England, Germany and other countries. Again the differences between individuals are infinitely greater than those between nations. To all this must be added that, since China is an older country, her merchants developed a sense of honor long before western countries. At a time when European commerce was half trade and half piracy, China had developed this high commercial morality. It is probably the half-buccaneering traders who first brought news of this strange and honorable custom to lands who as yet knew it not. Today Chinese commercial honor and English or American commercial honor differ little except that China had developed it centuries before it was adopted in foreign lands.—Harper's Magazine.

Criminals Use Tear Gas.

Equipment of a first-class criminal now includes a gas mask and a supply of tear gas, the War department indicates in a report showing that the crooks have not been far behind the police in adapting this war material to the pursuit of "peace."

An example is quoted of a bootlegger who carried tear gas in his rum-laden car and when pursued loosed it through the exhaust pipe. Pursuit ended immediately.

Because the criminal has become a customer of the gas mask manufacturers, many police departments are now considering the use of other than tear gas—something that the ordinary mask will not stop. Such a gas would be far more dangerous and equally as effective.

THE REASON FOR THE CANALS PROBE

It Is An Effort by Greene to Oust Walsh, Who is an Efficient and Enthusiastic Canal Man—Walsh Took Job With Promise of Complete Control.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Oct. 18.—Although strenuously denied by Colonel Frederick Stuart Greene, superintendent of the newly created state department of public works, it is persistently reported at the capitol that the probe into the financial affairs of the bureau of canals was brought about by Colonel Greene in an effort to oust Edward S. Walsh of Brooklyn as commissioner of canals.

Colonel Greene and Commissioner Walsh, according to the story going the rounds at the capitol, have not been the best of friends, officially speaking for some time. It is a known fact that Commissioner Walsh had strong political friends backing him for the post which Governor Smith decided should go to Colonel Greene.

Commissioner Walsh is an expert canal and traffic man and for years has been vitally interested in the success of the barge canal. He was superintendent of public works during the previous administration of Governor Smith. Shortly after the appointment of Colonel Greene, who was state highway commissioner, to the post of superintendent of public works under the consolidation scheme enacted by the last legislature, there was a report that the colonel would like to see the barge canal scrapped. This, however, was denied by Greene, who said he would do everything he could to promote the best interests of the canal.

The report about the colonel's wanting to scrap the canal, it is said, was the first break between the colonel and Commissioner Walsh.

Mr. Walsh accepted the post of commissioner of canals under Colonel Greene only after Governor Smith promised him he would have complete supervision over the state's waterways.

The investigation is expected to be completed in a week, or two weeks at the longest.

Cleaning Leather.

Leather pieces that are not badly marred will clean nicely with almond oil on fine cloths. Portraits that are exposed may be wiped very carefully with a damp cloth, then with a fine cloth with a wee bit of almond oil. They should be wiped carefully with soft, clean cloths. The wiping must be done quickly and very lightly. Sometimes just a damp cloth will be sufficient. A dry brush and soft cloth are all that it is safe to use in cleaning fine gilt frames unless they need doing over badly, in which case an old-fashioned remedy is as follows: Use flour of sulphur enough to color golden, a pint and a half of soft water. In this boil two chopped onions until soft, then strain and cool the liquid. When cold, use it to go over the frame with a camel's hair brush, and when the frame dries it will look like new.

Good Friday.

The vicar of Blackburn, England, protested in the local press against a Good Friday football match between the town's leading team and Glasgow, saying the day should not be used for amusement. But perversely enough practically all over Europe Good Friday is regarded as a day for holiday merriment. In Rome shops are generally open all day. Monaco is celebrated for its Good Friday mystery play. Of recent years in England the day has been marked by great outdoor religious processions. During the last year of the war, when the Germans were breaking our Fifth army, all the Protestant bodies united in a Good Friday outdoor procession and service. It was directed by the bishop of London, who yielded the principal place to the Salvation army.—London Mail.

Author of "My Old Kentucky Home."

"My Old Kentucky Home" was considered the masterpiece of Stephen Collins Foster. It was composed and sung for the first time at the homestead of Judge John Rowan, a representative in congress, a few miles east of Bardstown, Ky. Foster was a native of Pennsylvania, born at Lawrenceville (now a part of Pittsburgh), July 4, 1826, of Scotch-Irish descent. Mr. Foster was on a visit at the Rowan home when he wrote the song. Other popular songs that he wrote were "Old Folks At Home," "Gentle Annie," "Oh, Susanna," "Old Dog Tray," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground" and "Old Black Joe." His sister was a gifted musician. She was married to Rev. Edward Yeates Buchanan, the only brother of President Buchanan. Stephen Foster died in Pittsburgh January 13, 1864.

GOOD-BY TO CLOTHES MOTH

Scientists Said to Have Discovered Preparation Fatal to That Household Pest.

The clothes moth, which it is estimated destroys ten thousand tons of wool each year, may be absolutely controlled by the use of a new chemical called "Eulan F," which may be used in wool finishing. The substance is harmless to human beings, but wool impregnated with it is not eaten by the larvae of the moth except when starvation threatens, and it is then speedily fatal. The chemical has been prepared by the dye works of Leverkusen at Jena, Germany, by Doctor Meckbach and his collaborators.

Although it is preferably applied to the woolen article during or after the finishing process in the factory, it may be added subsequently to the completed goods by soaking them in a cold 2 per cent solution, or it may be sprayed on. The goods are then rinsed with pure water; and the Eulan finish is then said to be permanent for three or four household washings before needing renewal. A similar process may be used with furs.

The success of the new preparation, which is claimed by its inventors to be complete, comes after many years of experiment. It was noted 50 years ago that wool dyed green was safe from moths, and this was later shown to be due to the use of pigment called "Martius Yellow" in the dye. It remained then to find a chemical which would have this effect on the caterpillar, but be odorless and without effect on the color, or finish of the goods. This, the inventors say, they have done and that tests extending over several years have demonstrated the efficacy of this remedy against this great enemy of the careful housewife, against which the sole protection had previously been a kind of gas attack through the use of strong-smelling chemicals.

TELL OF OLD HAPPENINGS

Sixteenth Century Collection of Letters Recently Discovered in Austrian National Library.

A Sixteenth century collection of some 35,000 letters, which has just been discovered among the treasures of the Austrian National library, provides a sample of the raw material from which histories are written that is of more than usual interest. The collection, it appears, was made by one Count Philip Fugger, of the great House of Fugger, in Augsberg, the Fuggers representing the "Rothschilds" of the Reformation period. This house employed correspondents in almost every country, by whom copies of private letters containing news or entertaining gossip were obtained to be retailed to the public. Included in these letters is one giving a full account of the defeat of the great Spanish armada, with a description

The annual meeting of the Ulster County Bankers' Association was held in this city, Wednesday, with a special dinner served at the Hotel Stuyvesant. Covers were laid for thirty-six. The banks represented were the national, state and savings banks of this city and county. The following were elected as officers: Cornelius L. Van Orden, New Paltz, president; J. F. Wygant, Marlborough, vice-president; Edward W. Carpenter, Marlborough, secretary; Charles Tappen, Kingston, treasurer. The chairman announced he would announce the standing committees later.

Second Elijah.

In south India cholera had been raging through a village, but every man and woman who could walk had come to watch the drunken devil priest tear the living sacrifice to death with his teeth. Then, dipping his long whip in the warm blood of the dying goat, he danced round in a frenzy, beating the crowd and assuring them that he was driving the cholera goddess away from the village. The little Christian community gathered to pray. Suddenly the word came that the chief priest himself was down with cholera, and he sent to beg the white evangelist to come and save him. He went, and to the general amazement the man was saved.

KINGSTON DROPS FIRST MET. GAME

Yonkers Takes Hard Fought Battle From Manager Morgenweck's New Five—Large Crowd in Attendance.

Frank Morgenweck's 1923-24 basketball team got off to a poor start Wednesday evening, at the armory, losing to the Yonkers team 22 to 18.

The game was late in getting started, it being 9 o'clock before Referee Murray blew the opening whistle. Part of the delay was due to the presentation of a good luck wreath of flowers to Manager Frank Morgenweck The gift was made by some local basketball enthusiasts.

The large drill shed with its balcony was nicely filled, a record crowd for an opening game. This large number of customers were not exactly treated to a wonderful exhibition of basketball but they saw a hard fought battle. Lack of team, floor and pass work, as can be readily understood at this early stage of the season, was in evidence on the part of both quintets.

With the rounding out of team work and the players getting in basketball shape, Kingston's chances in the Metropolitan will be good, but by no means will they have the large number of wins they registered last year. Kingston had in uniform last evening, Levinson of Newburgh, again trying out for the team.

Yonkers had a very strong combination here last night. Saturday evening the Yonkers team lost to Paterson, but their forces were considerably stronger on the local court. Honey Russel was the big addition to the Yonkers team and he played a hard game

Stretch Malone was the honor man in getting points, having three fields and four fouls to his credit, a total of ten points. C. Husta and Riconda were next in order each with six points.

During the first period the local representatives got the edge on the down river five, the half ending 11 to 8. During this session play was slow, and the court men showed they were not in real condition. The new ball possibly had something to do with the players fumbling.

The visiting team made the first point, but the lead was not held very long as Thomas, who played on the home court last season with Schenectady, dropped one in from the play ground. From this time on Kingston held the lead until the first half closed. With three points to the good the second half was begun with much more pep. Play was decidedly rough right up to the last whistle Had Riconda had his shooting eye with him the score in all probability would be different. During the closing minutes many fouls were called on the visiting players but Kingston failed to register. Kennedy and Malone each dropped in two field goals in the final session, which pulled them right ahead of the Morgenweck clan.

Out of twenty-six chances from the fifteen foot line the home club was but able to make 10. Yonkers made good 8 out of 21. The new backboards helped considerably in making baskets last evening, which indicates that when the season is well under way that large scores will result.

There is slight change in the ruling of the Metropolitan League compared with the New York State League ruling as played here in former seasons. When two men are caught playing one man the ball is declared dead. Last year the man being played would be given a foul shot.

From the number of followers of basketball at the armory for this opening contest, this season should be one of the best patronized in the history of basketball.

Kingston now takes the cellar position in the league. On Saturday next at Yonkers the local representatives will play their second game.

The score:

A Little Goes a Long Way.

The research in radium and the X-ray is being carried forward constantly, much to the benefit of humanity at large. Although the price of radium averages in the neighborhood of $100,000 a gram, and a gram is only about one five-hundredth of a pound, the use of radium has been extended into dozens of different fields.

The layman is likely to wonder how radium can be used to illuminate the hands of watches and clocks when the cost of the material is so high. The fact is that it requires only a microgram of radium, mixed with zinc sulphide crystals, so to cover the hands of a number of watches that they will be luminous for years, and a microgram is but a millionth part of a gram. —Floyd W. Parsons in the Saturday Evening Post.

Child Labor in China.

Women and children are especially cheap in China, says Miss Tak-hing Shin, a welfare worker of Hong Kong, who is now in Europe studying conditions. In China there are 400,000,000 people, with only 4 per cent literate, and they die off by thousands, she asserts. When a child is a week or two old she is taken by her mother to the factory, laid in a corner, and fed at intervals. If she survives, in a year or two she toddles about among the machines. At four or five she learns the rudiments of the work, and at six or seven she is an adept, taking her place in the ranks of regular workers. They work from 12 to 16½ hours hours a day.

PORT EWEN

Port Ewen, Oct. 18.—Mid-week prayer service will be held in the Methodist Chapel this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Miss Bessie Dunn, Mrs. M. Kelsch and daughter Hilda, and sister, Miss Anna Bruck, of Kingston, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Dorr on Stout avenue.

The annual meeting of the Kingston District, Women's Foreign Missionary Society was held Wednesday at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The morning session opened at 10:00 o'clock by the Rev. George M. Cranston, pastor of Grace Church, Newburgh, N. Y. The regular order of business was carried out as the program indicated. Especially interesting and instructive were the remarks by Mrs. M. Byles of New Paltz as she presented the extension work in her plain, helpful and pleasing manner! Her appeal to the workers was most pathetic and she left on the minds of her hearers a wonderful truth and a desire to help on the work in a more able and efficient manner. The session closed at noon. Over one hundred dinners were served. The afternoon session opened at 1:30; communion; Dr. Grinton in charge. The address by Mrs. J. Appley, conference treasurer, was one of great interest and spiritual uplift, and very encouraging to all missionary workers. The evening session at 7:30. Devotional meeting led by Mrs. M. Byles was a meeting long to be remembered on account of the Christian atmosphere. The pageant by the young people entitled "Who Follows the Gleam" was fine. The address by Miss Elizabeth Strow, missionary from China, was wonderful. The entire session was very interesting and instructive and those who did not attend missed a rare treat socially and spiritually.

The fair and bazaar under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed Church will be held in Pythian Hall Friday evening, October 19. A chicken supper with all accessories will be served at 6 o'clock. The reputation of these ladies for serving fine suppers is widely known. The Dorcas Society will give an entertainment at 8 o'clock, for which a small admission will be charged. Ice cream, candy and soft drinks on sale.
